AUTO STRIKE LAYOFF HITS 22,375 MORE

Detroit, Jan. 7 (INS)—Both good and bad news hit the strike-harassed auto industry today.

More wholesale layoffs were announced, adding thousands to the list of idle workers affected by the General Motors strike.

Federal Mediator James F. Dewey, after a series of huddles with the General Motors high command and union strategists, reported "things are getting along toward a meeting between General Motors and Auto Union officials."

Announcement was made of the layoffs tonight and tomorrow in Saginaw and Flint and Bay City, Mich., and affecting 22,375 more auto workers.

The impending layoffs in three more General Motors plants will bring the total of the company's idle since to 75,178 men and women in a half-dozen states.

MURPHY SEEKS PEACE

Governor Frank Murphy, close friend of President Roosevelt, brought the warring forces together today. He expressed hope for an early settlement between General Motors and the United Automobile Workers Union.

Two [illegible] presented themselves to the federal mediators for the rapid-fire developments today. They were:

(1) Recognition of the union as the sole bargaining agency for General Motors' 235,000 employes. (2)

POPE'S MALADY IN BOTH LEGS

Vatican City, Jan. 7 (INS)—Dr. Amanti Milani, personal physician to Pope Pius, today confirmed that paralysis has spread to both the Pontiff's legs.

The Pope, it was learned today, no longer suffers pain in either limb. His nervous system apparently has succumbed to lack of blood nourishment due to varicosis and an advanced state of arterio-sclerosis.

It was officially denied the Pope had suffered recent fainting spells, although his vitality became extremely low this morning. He has told his physicians he can bear the suffering but realizes he cannot last much longer.

"I do not rebel against the pain," he said, "but I want to work."

1st Security Pension 17 Cents

Cleveland, Jan. 7 (AP)—Ernest Ackerman, 65, for 23 years a motorman for the Cleveland Railway Co., stepped forward today as the first man in Cleveland, and maybe the first in the country, to apply for his social security old age pension. Ackerman will make a net profit of 12 cents.

Ackerman became 65 years old Jan. 5. His wages for Jan. 1 amounted to $5.00. A one per cent tax on that amounted to a fraction less than 5 cents.

Under the plan, the veteran motorman is entitled to 3½ per cent of his total wages which figures out to be a little more than 17 cents.

Here's a Security Tax Dilemma

Hartford, Conn., Jan. 7 (AP)—A Hartford department store announced today it intended to pay the full social security tax for its 45 to 50 employes and officials of the Internal Revenue Bureau here began to wonder if complications might not arise.

As an example, the management said that in the case of a clerk earning $15 per week, the store will not deduct 15 cents tax from his pay but will forward itself both the employe's tax and its own tax.

Officials at the Internal Revenue Bureau brought up the question then of whether the additional 15 cents given the employe does not become part of his wage and also subject to a one per cent tax.

'See You All Again' Curley Tell Crowd

Retiring Governor Curley again today referred to his contemplated return to the political arena before he entered his limousine following his walk down the State House stairs.

Because of the cheering crowd, many did not hear his remark when he said:

"I thank you all from the bottom of my heart. But this is not the end. I'll see you all again."

50 FRIENDS AT QUIET NUPTIALS

In little St. Mary's Chapel at Boston College, before 50 close friends and relatives, Mrs. Gertrude M. Dennis of Brookline today became the bride of Governor James M. Curley.

Two hours later the bridegroom relinquished the helm of state to his successor, Charles F. Hurley.

Bishop Francis J. Spellman, pastor of Sacred Heart Church, Newton, formerly of the Vatican staff and a personal friend of both Governor Curley and Mrs. Dennis, performed the ceremony and celebrated the mass that followed.

STAND IN RAIN

Simplicity marked the occasion, but more than 1000 persons, most of them women, standing in the rain with umbrellas raised, crowded about the outer door. After the marriage ceremony, about 70 were permitted to enter, filling the chapel for the mass.

The bride was attractively dressed in a traveling ensemble of beige, black and fur.

She wore a long beige wool coat, trimmed with lynx its full length, and under this a black wool dress surmounted by a Tyrolean jacket of beige, with black edging, three large black buttons and a

New York, Jan. 7 (AP)—Stocks surged upward fractions to 5 or more points in today's market apparently on revived hopes of an early settlement of the General Motors strike.

It was one of the fastest sessions of the past several weeks, with frequent buying waves pulling the ticker tape behind floor dealings. There was some selling in the final hour, but this was readily absorbed and the leaders were near their best at the close. Transfers were around 2,100,000 shares.

Landon Proposes Child Labor Law

Topeka, Jan. 7 (AP)—Governor Alfred M. Landon asked Congress today to enact a law "to protect adult labor from the underpaid labor of children."

In a letter to Senator Henry F. Ashurst, chairman of the judiciary committee, the 1936 Republican presidential nominee suggested that the measure require all child labor goods in interstate commerce to be so labeled; that it be made a federal offense for one to ship goods made by child labor into a state which prohibits their sale, and that the state be authorized to punish the sale of such goods.

HURLEY OPENS WAR ON POLICE POLITICS

Pictures and other stories on Pages 8, 14 and 15.

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Roundly denouncing prejudice and partisanship in government, particularly the "unholy alliance" of politics and police in Boston, Governor Charles F. Hurley declared today that such conditions will be tolerated no longer.

He said that it is common knowledge that criminal enterprises have flourished in this city without detection and prosecution.

He said that politics has seemingly been playing a part in the police activities of Boston to the demoralization of the police department.

Complete Text of Gov. Hurley's Inaugural Address on Pages 6 and 7

PLANS 'STUDY' OF BOSTON POLICE

He said he would not commit himself at this time to any specific change in the method of appointing a police commissioner, but that he would make a thorough study of Boston police problems, and that, meanwhile, he would hold the present commissioner to "a strict accountability for the rigid enforcement of the law."

The new governor, after taking his oath of office before the joint convention of the two branches of the 1937 Legislature, wasted no words in the opening of his inaugural address, but immediately outlined the administration attack on present and future problems.

Sane economy must be the watchword of office, he asserted, and just as prejudice and partisanship must be weeded out, so political plunder, padding payrolls, waste and extravagance in public expenditures must end.

CARE FOR DESTITUTE

"Government was created for the benefit of all," he said. "To this philosophy I pledge myself to give all my thought and energy, and I pray God for the strength and courage to serve impartially, with you, the best interests of our people."

No person, involuntarily destitute, must suffer and there must be no economy in investing in the essential needs of humanity, he made clear, but now is a time for caution, judgment, prudence, foresight and discretion.

His long-awaited declaration on the "pay-as-you-go" policy he put in the few words:

"Always mindful of the essential requirements of health, happiness and security, let us adjust the relationship between

G-Men Probe Looms Of Red Enlistment

Special to the Boston Evening American

New York, Jan. 7—Formal request that federal authorities take decisive steps to halt the recruiting of Americans for service with the Spanish Radicals has been made by Col. Lewis Landes, counsel for Bert Acosta, noted aviator.

In a letter to U. S. Attorney Lamar Hardy, Col. Landes asserted yesterday such recruiting violates a Federal statute and threatens to endanger this nation's neutrality.

Thorough investigation of his complaint by G-men is promised.

Assistant U. S. Attorney John F. Dailey, Jr., asserted such charges automatically go to the Federal Bureau of Investigation. The G-men make a complete check, reporting back to the U. S. attorney's office, which then decides what moves are warranted.

Reds Enlisting

Coincidentally with Col. Landes' action, documentary proof of the existence of organized efforts to hire American fliers to fight with Spain's Red forces was obtained exclusively by the New York American.

The new evidence was furnished by Ray Colton, widely known commercial pilot of Chicago. It comprised copies of letters purporting to show that Colton's enlistment with the Spanish Radicals was solicited in correspondence bearing the letterhead of Samuel A. Schacter, attorney of 11 West 42nd street, and the signature "S. A. Schacter."

Col. Landes last night quoted Acosta as saying it was a communication from Shacter's office which resulted in his enlistment with the Spanish forces last fall. Acosta is coming to America on the Paris.

According to Col. Landes, Acosta has received no pay for his services in Spain, although he was allegedly offered $1500 a month and a $1000 bonus for every enemy plane brought down.

Col. Landes, a prominent World War veteran, said he advised Acosta against going to Spain, but the aviator answered the financial returns were too attractive to be rejected.

Raise Fund Here

He quoted the flier as saying Shacter and some friends had organized a group to raise the money to send pilots to the Madrid forces and that Shacter had worked out all details with him, including payment of his passage to Spain.

The actual contracts, Col. Landes said, were signed on the other side.

He asserted he discussed with Mr. Shacter yesterday the question of pay due Acosta, but said Shacter replied there was nothing he could do about it here, but that he understood arrangements were under way for his payment abroad by representatives of the Spanish government.

In his letter to U. S. Attorney Hardy, Colonel Landes urged the appointment of a special U. S. attorney to investigate, prosecute and break up the recruiting of Americans to serve in Spain.

Groups of Madrid sympathizers, his letter said, should not be allowed to involve Americans in the Spanish civil war.

Colonel Landes declared last night that federal officials in Chicago and other large cities should take similar action.

Mr. Hardy, confined to his home with influenza, was not available for comment. Other legal authorities recalled that any person who, within the jurisdiction of the United States, recruits American residents for service with a foreign power violates a section of the federal penal code designed to preserve the neutrality of the United States and its people.

This section prohibits, under penalty of $3000 fine or three years' imprisonment, the recruiting of any one of America for the armed forces of "any foreign prince, state, colony, district or people."

Colton's Evidence

The situation of Colton, the Chicago aviator, was said to present a somewhat different problem from that of Acosta, since Colton, although allegedly solicited, refused the purported offer and did not go to Spain.

Mere solicitation, it was stated, does not constitute a violation of the federal law.

Acosta in his article in the Boston Evening American today, said his first enlistment abroad was arranged through a group of New Yorkers headed by Shacter, following a talk he had with "Attache Mendes" in the Spanish consulate here.

The new evidence was furnished by Colton in the form of copies of correspondence that purported to show:

1—That letters written on the stationery of Schacter and bearing a signature purporting to be Schacter's, solicited his enlistment with the Communist forces in Spain.

3—That he was offered $1500 a month and $1000 apiece for every enemy plane shot down.

At the Spanish consulate both acting Consul General Luis Carrega and "Mr. Mendes" were reported out of town. A spokesman said, however, that "Mr. Mendes" had no official connection with the consulate and was merely a "frequent visitor."

At Shacter's office all efforts to obtain a statement from him were futile.

In Chicago Colton said his correspondence began in November. Colton said:

"Early in November I received a phone call at my hotel from a man who said he was the Spanish consul in Chicago. He said he had received my name from friends who thought I might be interested in a proposition whereby I could make big money flying for the Spanish Nationalists.

"I pretended to be interested and the man said I would soon hear from the Spanish government's agent in New York."

Colton said that, under date of November 17, he received a letter signed "Samuel A. Shacter" which informed him his name had been recommended "as an aviator who is desirous of rendering service to the Spanish cause." The letter asked Colton to forward his qualifications.

Mr. Colton answered. He received another letter saying:

"We have a considerable number of men who have had extensive military experience in planning activities. Your services would be desired in actual flying and combat capacity."

Under date of Nov. 24, Colton received another letter outlining the terms, saying:

"The pay for pilots accepted will be $1500 per month, with an additional bonus of $1000 for each enemy plane shot down. There are further provisions for your benefit which need not be gone into in this letter."

Colton, commenting on the correspondence, said:

Others Accept

"I did not reply to the last letter. I did not accept the proposition because I do not think it would be the patriotic thing to do. Besides, I never had any intention of joining either side in the Spanish war; I simply wanted to learn what this proposition was about, because there had been so much talk among my aviator friends."

Colton said he had heard that three aviators from Chicago accepted offers to go to Spain, but did not know their names. He said he did not remember the name of the man who represented himself as being from the Spanish consulate in Chicago.

3 CITIES JOIN WAR ON VICE

With Brookline, Boston and Newton police joined in a triple war on operators of vice dens, new agitation against alleged widespread conditions of vice developed today in Winthrop.

Indignantly citizens of the shore community, asserting that gangsters chased out of Boston by Captain James T. Sheehan's squad were inaugurating a reign of vice and gambling in their town, proposed formation of a vigilant committee to halt the conditions.

Police of Winthrop were charged by the citizens with being lax in checking on so-called "night clubs" where vice and gambling was carried on without restraint.

VICE DENS CHECKED

Brookline has joined with Boston in a system of checking the movements of alleged operators of vice dens and maintaining such strict watch on them that they will be unable to carry on their activities.

In Brookline Lieutenant James Tonra and Sergeant Harry McNeill have been placed in complete charge of a so-called vice squad with authority from the board of selectmen to commandeer as many officers as they may need in preventing the existence of vice in the town.

Under the operation of this squad, secrecy will be the watchword in obtaining warrants and making raids against suspected places.

In Boston Captain Sheehan and his squad have been given supervision of activities against vice.

3 CITIES CO-OPERATE

Thus far they are confining their efforts to guarding against an influx of vice den operators in the city and co-operating with Brookline and Newton in the checkup of activities.

In Newton the situation is similar with guard being kept against such an influx. Police Chief Michael Hughes, voicing confidence in his department, declared that no probe of alleged graft by officers would be made.

The situation in Winthrop came out into the open after many weeks of rumors regarding the existence of gambling and vice.

SECURITY ACT IN NEW TEST

Washington, Jan. 7 (AP)—A new attack on constitutionality of the federal Social Security Act was filed in the Supreme Court today by Howes Brothers Company of Boston.

The company filed a petition directed also at the Massachusetts Unemployment Insurance Act, which supplements the federal legislation. The petitioner contended the state act was ineffective because the federal law was unconstitutional.

The appeal was from a ruling by the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts in Suffolk County which dismissed the complaint, holding the federal act did not violate the constitutional rights of the petitioner.

Howes Brothers was represented by Edward F. McClennen, Boston attorney, counsel for George P. Davis of Boston in his recent attack on the unemployment section of the federal law.

The Supreme Court refused Monday to pass on the Davis appeal at this time.

Soviets Rule Spain War, Says Flier

Soviet Russia, with the most efficient military and air organization participating in the Spanish Civil War, dominates the scene of conflict, according to Bert Acosta, noted American transatlantic ace, who has just returned to Paris after fighting with the Spanish government air force for a month. Following is the third and last of a series of articles wherein Acosta graphically describes his experiences in Spain.

By BERT ACOSTA
Famous Transatlantic Flier

(Copyright, 1937, by Universal Service)
(Reproduction in Whole or Part Strictly Prohibited)

Paris, Jan. 7—In Spain—the government's Spain or Red Spain or whatever you wish to call it—there is just one organization, one force worthy of respect. That is the Russian.

I have told nothing in my first two articles if I haven't told of my admiration of the fighting force sent from Russia to Spain.

I don't want to go into the political situation which made it possible for the Russians to be in the thick of the Spanish fighting. I only want to say the Soviets sent an organized, efficient, disciplined military machine which is able to work effectively in the midst of chaotic disorder.

Soviets Trained

Naturally, as the only well-organized force on the scene they seemed to be every place at once among half a dozen different groups of Spaniards, including Socialists, Communists, Anarchists and Republicans who can't agree among themselves.

As a flyer for the Socialist-Communist Government I know that the only help and only support I got was from the Russians. Everywhere I traveled the only troops I saw who seemed to know what they were doing were the Russians.

If I met a Russian motor truck even so far as a hundred kilometers away from other Russians, the men in charge gave the immediate impression of being soldiers. Their whole atmosphere under their Soviet red-starred caps pointed out that they knew where they were going, were sure to get what they wanted, and would be back to the second according to orders.

I saw Russians everywhere in the Spanish coast cities, busily unloading planes, tanks, cannon and munitions. The infantry and cavalry from Russian ships stood guard, acting as an organized force for law and order by making the gaping Spanish crowds stand back.

As a classic example of Russian Army efficiency I have only to compare the two airports at Bilbao where I flew. Sondica, the Spanish government field, was torn up, leaving hardly a place to land. Its commander screamed orders at Anarchists and mechanics who did as they pleased anyhow.

Sondica was a bombing field, but its planes were all of the antiquated, commercial "suicide patrol" type.

Three miles away is the Russian air field at Lamiaco—a military picture which would please the eye of the hardest-hearted sergeant in any army.

Franco in "Spot"

If you were to enter the airport any time at all, night or day, you'd find half a dozen pilots beside their machines ready to take off within a minute's notice. The pilot commander was a quiet-spoken serious officer whose orders were law.

The Russians looked at our little band of American flyers with pity. We were without uniforms or revolvers. They gave us both, but we still had to fly the old Curtis type flying crates with cyclone engines that turned them into "coffins."

But the Russians haven't brought their latest airplanes to Spain. That is an absolute fact unless they are all being used on the Madrid front which I did not see.

Without the Russian troops I don't think General Franco with his Moors could be stopped. Holy mackerel, how the Communist Spaniards hate the Moors!

On the other hand it is certain that General Franco would have wiped out the Spanish government forces if it were not for Russian help. The Madrid troops have guts, but no organization. The Russians brought that.

By the time the Soviet troops have completed their framework of resistance (they have been doing that rapidly), I don't see how Franco can hope to win out.

But whichever side wins will have a tough time. Fascists—Communists—Anarchists. They will never unite.

We Americans passed through Spain without attracting much attention, the people were friendly, and for us as Americans come to fight with them there was nothing more than the usual display of amity.

But just let a Russian soldier in his snappy corduroy relief uniform, carrying only sidearms, come along and he is immediately surrounded with a respectful silence.

Every Red soldier seemed to speak for the whole Soviet army.

The Soviet fighters never asked anything of the Spaniards. They brought with them everything that was necessary for a fighting man, even down to the tiniest detail.

They asked only for room to unload their ships, set up their motor trucks, tanks and planes. They wanted and got space for separate encampments, separate airfields, separate depots—everything separate, everything under Russian command, everything Russian except the ground they were moving over and if that is not Russian, it is in the power of the Russians who were on it.

Men Set Apart

Frenchmen and other foreign volunteers are just ordinary "volunteers" and were not treated with any special consideration. But the Russians were different—somehow like personalities apart from the rest of Spain's milling populace.

For instance: The Alicante Quai was crowded one day with traders shoving each other around without order. Down to the dock came a Russian ship.

Almost immediately an unloading space was cleared. Not a single person dared approach those in the business of unloading and directing motor trucks inland.

I got to know members of a Russian air group about fifty miles away from Bilbao. They were a replacement squadron with a couple of dozen planes, standing by under permanent guard with every man knowing his job, this was one of the smallest Russian units.

We Americans had no such protection. When I left Spain several days ago, there must have been about 200 Russian fighting planes in action. With the equivalent number of pilots and the necessary mechanical staffs this would bring the Soviet flying force in Spain well above 500 men.

French and Spanish government aviators and a few others made up the rest, totaling another 250 Socialist-Communist planes in action.

France has between three and four hundred Fiat Pursuiters, Caproni Bombers, German Heinkle Pursuiters and Junker Bombers.

The only completely organized and unified force on either side is the Russian.

Since the opening of the civil war, the Madrid government must have thrown about 800 planes into battle. But only 500 were ever any good. The others have cracked up by now.

Nobody makes any bones about Spain being the scene of an international war any more.

On the government side they hate the Moors, Italians and the Germans, all of whom actually represent enemies.

On the other side they no doubt hate the Red Russians or anybody who helps the Reds. The war is at present localized in Spain, but it is certainly no longer a Spanish civil war.

To Rule

MARRIAGE ADVICE BY BURGOMASTER

The Hague, Jan. 7 (INS)—Royal love that began less than a year ago at their first meeting was sealed at the altar today when Crown Princess Juliana, future ruler of 68,500,000 subjects, and Prince Bernhard of the little German principality of Lippe-Biesterfeld, were married amid the wild cheers of hundreds of thousands who jammed The Hague.

Carnival gaiety of all Holland was increased tenfold when the rain squalls and wind gusts that had threatened to mar the brilliance of the wedding fled with dawn, and a bright sun burst into a cloudless sky.

Beaming with a joy that showed this was no "marriage of convenience" arranged by ministerial gray-beards, the 27-year-old crown princess and her bridegroom, a year and a half her junior, drove first in a golden carriage to the little town hall, where they were married in civil ceremony by the smiling burgomaster.

Prince Bernhard Zu Lippe-Biesterfeld, former Nazi Storm Trooper, was one of two most popular persons in Holland today. The other was his bride, Princess Juliana.

Long Church Rites

With the roars of the people rising to a crescendo [illegible] they went through the decorated streets to the old red brick Groote Kerk (great church) of St. James, where the long and simple religious ceremony at once got under way.

Forty minutes behind schedule due to slow progress of the procession through the crowded streets, the religious ceremony ended shortly after noon, when the royal newlyweds left the church.

Just like any other couple Juliana and Bernhard were given a homely lecture of sage advice by the burgomaster on how to be happily married. Dutch custom dictates that these talks be given and no exception was made in the case of the Crown Princess any more than it was when her mother, Queen Wilhelmina, was married in the midst of similar scenes of rejoicing 36 years ago.

Brief and Formal

The rest of the civil marriage service was brief and formal, consisting of a few questions and "I do's" by the bride and bridegroom, and signing of the marriage book by the couple and their witnesses.

At the insistence of the stern Queen, brought up in simple Dutch taste, the ritual of the ancient church was likewise with little adornment.

It began with a [illegible], then a hymn and a long speech by the officiating clergyman, the Rev. Willem Leonard Welter, former court chaplain.

When the prince and princess exchanged their vows they also exchanged wedding rings, another Dutch tradition, and a Bible was presented to them.

Juliana also wore a bracelet containing 1700 jewels, the gift of her future 68,500,000 subjects in the Dutch East Indies.

Kneel on Carpet

The center of interest for the throng—some estimates put it as high as 2,000,000—that came to the little "City of Peace" from all over the Netherlands and from practically every country in the world, was the pomp and circumstance of the procession to the church.

Smartly-uniformed troops preceded the gilt carriage that was first used by Wilhelmina for her marriage, and is used each year for the state opening of the states general.

Mounted officers of the Royal Hussars surrounded the bridal couple.

Queen Wilhelmina and Princess Armgard of Lippe Biesterfeld, mother of the bridegroom, came in the next carriage. Then followed an array of nearly a score of coaches, bearing German and other foreign princes and representatives of foreign powers. The Duke of Kent represented his brother, King George of England.

Juliana and Bernhard knelt on red carpets before two chairs which were marked by their coats of arms. Juliana's carried lions and the motto "Je maintiendrai" ("I will maintain,") and Bernhard's had birds clinging to stars.

Alone on Chair

The plain interior of the church was brightened only by a few lilies and palm trees on the altar. A special choir from Haarlem and the bright uniforms of some of the foreign princes and government representatives added a touch of color.

There was no throne for Queen Wilhelmina. She sat alone on a plain chair. Around and behind were grouped the other notables.

Crown Princess Juliana, the radiance of her lovely complexion heightened by her obvious happiness, wore a rich velvet gown cut on simple lines and shot with gold thread and a tulle veil.

Her 12 bridesmaids, six of them Dutch girls with whom the Princess went to University at Leyden, and six Dutch noblewomen and German princesses, wore gowns of various pastel shades, blending into an attractive picture.

Bernhard had 12 groomsmen, all his personal friends.

The Hague probably has never been so gaily decorated. Orange pennants flew everywhere and orange lights blazed brightly on every pillar and post. On shields, the initials "J" and "B" were entwined. Hardly a person was without an orange flower or some other article of the color of the house of Orange-Nassau.

4th Brother Dying In Gangster Feud

New York, Jan. 7 (INS)—With old-style gangster technique, three gunmen in a moving automobile today shot and critically wounded 21-year-old William Leahy, last surviving member of the notorious Leahy clan of Hell's Kitchen. A companion, Joseph De Cesare, was also shot.

Leahy was taken to a hospital and a priest summoned to administer the last rites.

The youth is the last of four brothers, and police believed the shooting was the culmination of a feud in which first one and then another had been slain since 1925.

CoverCharge of Quarter!

The Hague, Jan. 7 (INS) The Hague was so crowded today for the wedding of Princess Juliana that restaurants charged 25 cents for admission alone.

Meets Her Romeo in Beer Hall

The Hague, Jan. 7 (AP)—Crown Princess Juliana is said to relate she found her "Romeo" in an Alpine snowbank.

But there is another version of how Juliana and German Prince Bernhard Zu Lippe-Biesterfeld, her bridegroom of today, became acquainted.

They are said first to have seen each other about a year ago in an Alpine beer hall, when both were spectators at the winter Olympics at Garmisch-Partenkirchen.

Bernhard, supposedly, danced with Juliana and next day received a telephone call from the Princess' secretary inviting him to luncheon.

Bernhard, it is told, said he didn't think practical jokes were funny and hung up.

The secretary called again, assured him of the identity of his dancing partner, and the royal romance blossomed.

Nab Car Theft Gang

Chicago, Jan. 7—Four men accused of traveling across half the continent in a series of stolen automobiles were in jail today. All pleaded guilty to violating the Dyer act.

'OTHER JULIANA' WEDDED TO BOATMAN

Leyden, the Netherlands, Jan. 7 (AP)—Petronella Van Der Meer, Holland's "other Juliana," was married today to Martinus Van Stijn, a canal boatman, in the little village of Oestgeest.

She was given royal consent to marry today, despite a ban on other weddings, because she and the crown princess were born the same hour of the same day 27 years ago.

Unlike the brilliant pageantry at the capital, Petronella and Martinus were married simply and quietly—she in a dark blue dress and velvet hat to match, with a bouquet of artificial flowers, and he in a black coat and striped trousers—the customary raiment of a middle-class bridegroom.

There was no money for a wedding trip, but like most of the rest of Holland, the new Mr. and Mrs. Martinus Van Stijn planned to be in The Hague at least part of today to join the celebration for the other newly-weds.

Petronella, with her own home and her own pots and pans after years in the kitchens of other townspeople, wants to be a housewife and raise a family.

Her 31-year-old husband, who has almost finished paying for his own boat, wants to outsell every other vegetable salesman on Holland's many canals.

U. S. Women at Wedding

The Hague, Jan. 7 (AP)—Two American women, both friends of Queen Wilhelmina, were special guests today at the wedding of Crown Princess Juliana and Prince Bernard Zu Lippe-Biesterfeld.

They are the former Elizabeth Glover of Washington, D. C., wife of Jonkheer Reneke De Marees Van Swinderen, the Netherlands' minister to Great Britain, and the former Allene Tew of Jamestown, N. Y., recent bride of Count Paul De Kotzebue.

Stolen Car Chain Gang Sentenced

They were George E. Ritchie, 19, of Kearney, N. J.; Edmond Theriault, 33, of Howland, Me., and his brothers, Francis and Raymond of Howland. Their sentences ranged from one to two years in Leavenworth.

Julia, Benno Have Titles Aplenty

The Hague, Jan. 7 (AP)—Europe's newest royal couple are known familiarly as "Julia" and "Benno", but their full names and titles are long and weighty.

The heiress to the throne of the Netherlands is Juliana Louise Emma Marie Wilhelmina, Princess of Orange-Nassau, Duchess of Mecklenburg.

Her prince is Bernhard Leopold Friedrich Eberhard Julius Kurt Karl Gottfried Peter, Prince of Lippe-Biesterfeld.

3 Holdups Bring Bandits Only $25

Malden and Revere police today sought a pair of industrious but unlucky bandits who held up three drug stores in rapid succession but obtained less than $25 for their pains.

Stores robbed were John J. O'Leary's Fellsway Pharmacy, Malden; Morris Rudenstein's Sylvan and Lebanon street shop, Maplewood, Malden, and a pharmacy and confectionery shop in Revere street, Revere.

AS I SEE IT

By DAMON RUNYON

(Copyright, 1937, by King Features Syndicate. International copyright and all other rights reserved.)

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Jan. 7—We have what you might call a sneak boom going on down here at this end of the Florida peninsula.

To the outside world, we vigorously pish and tush any talk of a boom, however—because the last boom we had up and busted right under our moustaches, and knocked our ears down, and we don't want nervous strangers to get the impression that another explosion may be lurking in the neighborhood.

DAMON RUNYON

So we just don't let on to outsiders, although among ourselves we have to admit that a boom is certainly sneaking stealthily along in our midst. You can trace its spoor in poured concrete and carpenter's chips from Hollywood, on the north, to Cocoanut Grove on the South.

Moreover, we hear that a lot of spasmodic movements that bear all the earmarks of little boomlets stirring in their cocoons are to be observed in other parts of the State of Florida.

But we say to the visitors:

"A boom? Nonsense. It's just our normal, healthy growth. We do not tolerate booms in this vicinity any more. A mosquito, eh? Or two, yes. A stray moccasin snake here and there, yes. But a boom, no. They are too treacherous."

Rash of Hotels Breaks Out

And among ourselves we say:

"What the Sam Hill (that's our local dialect) is this all about, anyway? Hadn't we better get in, or hadn't we?"

A rash of new hotels of strange modernistic aspect has broken out all over Miami Beach, spiking the white sands with glittering ivory towers.

The landscape of the strip that splits the Atlantic Ocean out from Biscayne Bay is pimpled with hundreds of brand new little dwellings, some built by private owners, others by investors on speculation.

These little houses are of a type that comes within the $5000 tax exemption allowed on homesteads by the State of Florida. But in addition to the little houses, and the hotels, scores of apartment houses have been erected, and scores of magnificent new pink and white villas are being thrown up along the ocean front by rich men, and richer women.

A couple of years ago around here they were slipping villas into your pants pockets when you weren't looking, now most of the old ones have been sold, and they are building bigger, and better villas. Bigger, anyway. For some reason, the villa builders always seem to think they require the space of a public auditorium when they put up a winter home, and we know one chap who built so expensively on Miami Beach that he can't find his way around in his villa without a guide.

Now Is Weather-Beaten Pioneer

Nick Schenck, the movie magnate, bought one of the old villas on the ocean for $100,000 not long ago. It stood the original builder about $800,000, and he died before he could occupy it. Now Mr. Schenck is putting about as much as his purchase price into his villa in improvements, including a big swimming pool, and what not.

We asked Mr. Sailing Baruch about that. Mr. Baruch is of the financial Baruchs and was for years the Beau Brummel of Broadway and Park avenue. Now he is a weather-beaten pioneer of Miami Beach.

"Why does a man want a swimming pool, when he has the whole Atlantic ocean in his front yard?" we asked him.

"You are apparently unfamiliar with movie magnates," replied Mr. Baruch. "Nobody ever heard of a movie magnate without a swimming pool."

A Miami Beach villa-in occupies his villa about three months in the year, hand running. The other nine months, he pays taxes, a caretaker, and etcetera. The etcetera runs into right nice money. But the rich men and richer women who winter down here would feel socially embarrassed if some of their friends happened in on them and caught them without a villa.

It is about ten years ago that our big boom busted, leaving behind it vast stretches of avenues carved out of the mangrove swamps for subdivisions that were expected to teem with the homes of happy dwellers, though in most of them nary a foundation had yet been laid when the concussion came off.

Then Came the Big Blow

The fast growing tropical shubbery soon swarmed over the landscape again with a fury that indicated it was pretty sore about ever having been removed. It climbed up the fancy lamp posts that stood along the streets, and over the elaborate gates that every subdivision boasted.

Then came the big blow to complete the ruin, and for years the subdivisions were just a vague, and somewhat painful local memory, and George Merrick, and Paul Beacom, and Frank Croissant, and all the rest of the phalanx of bright dreamers and hopeful souls were broke.

Now of a sudden, many of these subdivisions are being dragged out of the underbrush again, and dusted off, and refurnished, and houses built on them, and some of the old timers, notably George Merrick, who built Coral Gables, are back in action, and new dreamers have bobbed up with fresh laid dreams.

They are salvaging the bones of the old boom. A Milwaukee man has just paid $1,000,000 for a collection of manufactured islands in Biscayne Bay that stood the original builder $5,000,000, and is making ready to go to town with a development. Another set of islands in the bay on which the lots were to be sold by the karat during the boom, which were never opened, has recently been placed on the market and a lot of fine residences are being built there.

Another $2,000,000 Hotel

Among ourselves we say:

"Where are they going to get the people to fill all these new places?"

Then we read that another hotel to cost $2,000,000 has just been ordered for Miami Beach, and that there's a big squawk around about lack of accommodations, and that up north you can't get railroad or air reservations for days ahead.

And cars from every state in the union swarm the streets of Miami and Miami Beach, and acres of trailers are parked in the outlying districts, and long caravans are sliding down the road from Jax, and Mr. Ed Romfh's bank is jammed with customers putting it in, and taking it out, and the cops are dizzy trying to keep the traffic in order.

So we wag our heads and say to each other that things are certainly perking up, and that it shore is a great tribute to our climate—it shore is—(local dialect) and that maybe we ought to get in, at that, but we do not call it a boom. No indeed. Not in the hearing of outsiders. We don't want to alarm these birds. We want to wait and catch 'em settin'.

POSSES ALLOW KIDNAPER TO GET RANSOM

Tacoma, Wash., Jan. 7 (AP)—Charles Mattson's kidnaper was afforded full opportunity today to realize freely the $28,000 ransom he demanded and to return his victim.

The kidnaper was assured of safety by complete inactivity of all law enforcement agencies.

The department of justice, state patrolmen and city police all have acquiesced to the plea by Dr. W. W. Mattson that no action be taken which might endanger the life of his 10-year-old son, held captive 11 days.

Even the corps of newspapermen and photographers which has been at the Mattson residence since Dec. 27 was absent today to give the kidnaper an open road to the family.

NO INTERFERENCE

The kidnaper could do almost anything he chose without official interference. This was obvious from records of the George Weyerhaeuser kidnaping here in 1935.

Then Washington State patrolmen saw William Mahan placing signal flags at the side of a highway preparatory to receiving the $200,000 ransom payment.

They asked authority to arrest him, being certain he was connected with the kidnaping but were told to ignore him, thus allowing the ransom payment without interference.

Similar latitude already has been shown by officers in the Mattson case. There was no indication early today the ransom has been paid. The boy had not been returned.

PAYMENT STILL PENDS

Belief the payment still pended was based on a second voluntary statement to the press given Wednesday by Dr. Mattson. In it he asked newspapermen to follow the example of law officers in allowing him free rein in his dealings with the kidnaper.

The doctor requested the watch be removed from his home, stories of advertisement believed to be contact efforts be stopped and his personal activities be left free of surveillance.

Observers immediately pointed out no such request would be necessary if the ransom money had been paid.

FATHER SUFFERS STRAIN

Within a few hours, the lack of a check on the Mattson home produced half a dozen rumors the ransom payment had been made and the boy returned.

By telephone Dr. Mattson categorically denied the return, asserting:

"There's no one by that name (Charles) here. I wish there were."

Dr. Mattson obviously was suffering from great strain and appeared to fear strongly for his son's safety.

Edward and Wally Plan U. S. Visit; Tryst Reported

Vienna, Jan. 7 (INS)—The Duke of Windsor and Mrs. Wallis Simpson, when they are married next April, plan a trip to the United States and Cuba, it was learned today. They will afterwards make their permanent home in Austria.

Enzesfeld, Austria, Jan. 7 (INS)—With plans for a rendezvous between the Duke of Windsor and Mrs. Wallis Simpson, it was reported, A. R. Storier, Scotland Yard detective, returned to Castle Enzesfeld today from Cannes.

He was sent to the Riviera resort four days ago with a message from the duke to Mrs. Simpson.

U. S. CHECKS UP ON SHIP CREWS

Federal investigation of charges that vessels have been allowed to leave Boston undermanned and without accredited officers was under way today.

The probe was launched on order of Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper, following complaints of striking seamen. The seamen charge that the Lykes Line freighter Lafcoma, which grounded in Buzzards Bay last Sunday night, did not have "a single able-bodied seaman aboard."

Confirming reports of the investigation, Leo F. O'Brien, chairman of the United States Shipping Commission, stated that federal agents would determine if there have been violations of the federal laws relating to the numbers of able seamen and accredited officers for ships. Permits to clear ports would be held up if requirements are not fulfilled.

Wife Sues 'Death Valley Scotty'

Long Beach, Cal., Jan. 7 (INS)—Walter E. Scott, known the world over as Death Valley Scotty, was sued today in Superior court by Mrs. Ella Josephine Scott, 60, who claimed she married Scotty in Cincinnati, Ohio, on November 5, 1900, and that they had never been divorced.

Mrs. Scott sued for separate maintenance. She asked $1000 per month for living expenses and medical. She asserted she was suffering from physical disabilities and was without funds.

PEACE PARLEY OPENS IN AUTO STRIKE

Withdrawal of sit-down strikers from the plants they occupy.

TENTATIVE TERMS

General Motors announced 22,375 more of its 235,000 employes would be idle by tomorrow night, bringing the total number of idle in their plants alone to 75,178 then.

It said the main plant of Chevrolet would close Friday night, affecting 14,375 workers.

Federal Mediator James F. Dewey obtained three tentative terms for peace from General Motors: (1) It will not attempt to operate closed plants while settlement negotiations are in progress. (2) Sit-down strikers must be evacuated from plants before negotiations begin. (3) The company will deal with the United Auto Workers as representing its members, but not as a sole bargaining agent for all its employes.

Other strike developments:

1—Intimation by a union spokesman that John L. Lewis, head of the Committee on Industrial Organization, and Edward F. McGrady, ace trouble shooter for the U. S. Labor Department, might both arrive here today. But in Washington both men stated they planned no immediate trip to Detroit.

ASKS JUDGE OUSTER

2—The United Auto Workers petitioned the state legislature to impeach Circuit Court Judge Edward D. Black of Flint, charging he owns stock in General Motors and that this made him an interested party when he issued an injunction ordering strikers from two Fisher Body plants.

3—Fleet Wood and Cadillac division employes, of General Motors, meet tonight to hear a report on collective bargaining negotiations with their bosses and then to decide on what action to take on an earlier vote tentatively calling for a strike.

4—Announcement of a meeting of all 12,000 employes of Ternstedt Company, for Friday night. About 7000 workers, largely dependent on General Motors orders, are out of work.

5—Announcement by Secretary of Commerce Roper in Washington of his "keen interest" in the strike and his prediction of early settlement. "We'd like to be helpful in every way we can."

TOWNSEND AGE MOVE JOLTED

Los Angeles, Jan. 7 (US)—Attended by the attaching of the Townsend National Weekly and the establishment of a deputy sheriff in its former offices here to guard its impounded accounts, a new revolt, the second in a year, has split the old age pension movement three ways.

Each side is represented by its bitterly competing weekly publication—a Chicago edition of the Townsend Weekly, George Highley's Hi-lights and a brand-new journal launched this week by the leader of the latest segment to break from the Townsend movement, M. D. Cerf, former editor of the Townsend Weekly.

Today only a handful of a once large staff held forth there under the presidency of Deputy Sheriff Rautensperger, stationed in the office when Charles Dalziel, former advertising manager, filed suit for $2600 allegedly due him in commissions.

The attachment served not only to tie up the circulation address stencils at a local mailing establishment, but impounded at least $10,000 in accounts with advertisers, it was said.

NEW BEDFORD FISTS FLY

New Bedford, Jan. 7—Flying fists and chairs today marked the end of the second session of the New Bedford City Council, endeavoring to elect a president, as the council adjourned indefinitely after an all-night meeting.

Twelve members of the faction supporting the candidacy of Leo Tracy attempted to leave the council chambers without setting a date for a future meeting, when other councillors, enraged at the loss of a quorum, began hurling chairs and fists.

A few of the city fathers nursed bumps and bruises but there were no serious casualties.

Here's Simple Way to Ease a Cold

Two Quick-Acting, Quick-Dissolving Bayer Aspirin Tablets with a Glass of Water

The modern way to ease a cold is this: Two Bayer Aspirin tablets the moment you feel a cold coming on. Then repeat, if necessary, according to instructions in the box.

At the same time, if you have a sore throat, crush and dissolve three BAYER tablets in one-third glass of water. And gargle with this mixture twice.

The Bayer Aspirin you take internally will act to combat fever and the pains which usually accompany colds. The gargle will act as a medicinal gargle to provide almost instant relief from rawness and pain. It is really marvelous; for it acts like a local anesthetic on the irritated membrane of your throat.

Try this way. Your doctor, we know, will endorse it. For it is a quick, effective means of combating a cold. Ask for Bayer Aspirin by the full name at your druggist's — not for "aspirin" alone.

Death Chair Waits for 3

'Trigger Man' Cries in Cell

Ossining, N. Y., Jan. 7 (AP)—Cocky Joe Bolognia, 24, "trigger-man" in the $230 holdup murder of a Brooklyn subway collector, "broke" today in Sing Sing death house and whimpered for a chance to make a statement before he joins two confederates in the march to the electric chair at 11 o'clock tonight.

"It's important," he whispered nervously, begging for an interview with District Attorney William F. Geoghan of Brooklyn. "I gotta see him right away."

While Bolognia paced his cell back and forth, the two men who must die with him, Salvatore Scata, 19, and Theodore Di Donnes, [illegible], drowsed apathetically on their bunks.

'SANE ECONOMY' HURLEY KEY IN PLEA FOR REFORMS

GOV. HURLEY'S PLATFORM

Inaugural Address Is Outline of His Aims

FOR

Relief of involuntary destitution, improvement of living standards, preservation of morale . . . required by the very nature of our contract.

Curtailment in municipal debt . . . recognizing normal expenditures to be less than 1936, but more than 1929.

Continuance of Port Development Commission to complete studies already begun.

Appropriation for advertising our recreational advantages and co-operation with N. E. Regional Planning Board.

Biennial sessions of the Legislature.

Study of fire insurance rates with view to equitable revision.

Co-operation of all branches of government in maintaining educational standards and study of University Extension policies.

Commission to investigate all phases of work of Department of Mental Diseases, to report a complete, practical and scientific plan for wise handling of mental defectives.

Rigid enforcement of law in City of Boston by Police Commissioner and strict accountability for that office.

Keeping judiciary and courts aloof from all partisan political considerations.

Reorganization of district courts and consolidation of those in less populous districts.

Restoration to all standing judges of privilege of voluntary retirement and allowances at age 70 and similar provisions of compensation for those involuntarily retired.

Smaller juries (six or eight, five or seven) members in civil and criminal, except capital cases.

AGAINST

A policy of extravagance in disbursement of public funds, squandering the substance of those who have faith in our integrity.

Large scale borrowing, which, continued, would oppress the taxpayer and halt essential improvements.

Further delay in liquidating closed banks and payments of double fees in cases of liquidating agents who shift duties to their own attorneys.

Continuance of pre-primary conventions.

Laxity in enforcement of automobile laws and "fixing."

Continuance of policy which makes Massachusetts at present only state with no teacher certification requirements.

Further additions to public payrolls, under protection of Civil Service, of those whose only claim to recognition is political.

Mixing politics with police activities to demoralization of department.

Participation of the judiciary in purely partisan political affairs.

Judges engaging in private practice of law, particularly special justices in their own courts.

Statutes taking away privilege of voluntary retirement after certain date and fixing pension in these cases at half pay as of certain dates.

Prejudice and injustice, political or class partisanship in government.

TELLS LEGISLATORS DEBTS MUST BE SHARPLY CUT

SMALL JURIES, BOSTON PORT IMPROVEMENTS URGED

The complete text of Governor Charles F. Hurley's first message to the Legislature follows:

Members of the General Court:

By virtue of the suffrage of the electorate, we become today and remain for the next two years, the official servants of the people of Massachusetts. In us they have reposed their confidence, to us they have delegated their authority. Henceforth, until the expiration of our terms of office, their security must be our solemn obligation, their welfare must be the primary object of our solicitude.

No one can minimize the importance of this responsibility. I know that all of us are entirely conscious of it and that consciousness suggests the paramount necessity of our [illegible] together, in a friendly and co-operative relationship, for the benefit of all our people.

We come into office at a difficult time. The ravages of the depression are still being felt. These are indicated by the persistence of widespread unemployment, by staggering welfare rolls, by the partial breakdown of private charities, by the urgent need for the continuation of Federal projects, by mounting taxes, diminishing revenue and consequent perplexities in the administration of the affairs of government.

Sane Economy Vital

It seems to me to be a time when sane economy is indispensable to the proper performance of our duties. Of course, I realize that the requirements of the situation must be met. Massachusetts' demands must be satisfied; our people have a right under the Constitution of the Commonwealth to the pursuit of happiness where lies within our powers to provide.

Expenditures for the relief of involuntary destitution, the improvement of living standards, the preservation of morale are not only justified but are required by the very nature of our contract with the citizens. There can be no quarrel among us as to the propriety of investing in the essential needs of humanity, even when that investment involves sacrifice on the part of the more fortunate.

What we must avoid, however, is a policy of extravagance in the disbursement of public funds. What we must resist is the temptation to squander the substance of those who have faith in our integrity. As custodians of the resources of the Commonwealth, we are charged with the definite obligation of conserving wisely and of spending judiciously.

Ordinary prudence should dictate such a program. We are passing through the aftermath of the worst financial tragedy in the history of our nation and of our state. We are in process of rebuilding a new order upon the ruins of the old. This is a time for caution, for the exercise of deliberate judgment, for prudence, foresight and discretion.

A reckless indifference to the lessons of experience at this time could easily impair or even destroy the work of reconstruction. There can be no valid defence, under any circumstances, for wasteful management of governmental affairs; but the folly of such a policy when our people are struggling with their present burdens is so evident that it needs no demonstration.

Office Watchword

Therefore, let sane economy be our watchword in office. Always mindful of the essential requirements of health, happiness and security, let us adjust the relationship between revenue and disbursement in a reasonable and equitable basis. Let us give Massachusetts the kind of administration she has the right to expect and desire.

Relief legislation has proved very helpful both to the taxpayers and to its beneficiaries, since it has distributed the excessive cost of the relief load and has provided a method whereby no municipality need find itself unable to furnish necessities to those in want.

The financial condition of our cities and towns has been in no way seriously affected by this legislation. In fact, during the period of necessary relief borrowing, the cities and towns have been so conservative in their construction program that the net debt is now $20,000,000 less than it was four years ago.

This splendid showing indicates that the legislation permitting borrowing for expenses has been used and not abused. The Emergency Finance Board has played its part by serving as a balance wheel, but the results are a credit to all.

In normal times no one would advocate building up a debt burden for the taxpayer to bear, but in abnormal times such as we have been experiencing, conditions warranted it to a limited extent.

Debt Cuts Needed

The policy followed during the past four years in giving a measure of relief by borrowing is justified, but a continuance of the same policy to the same extent certainly would be indefensible in view of the very definite and progressive improvement which has opened positions to a great number of people, and brought corresponding relief to the municipalities.

There must be a proportionate curtailment in municipal debt. If large scale borrowing is continued, we shall soon find that the amount annually required for interest on this particular type of indebtedness will so oppress the taxpayer that municipalities will be unable to provide for such improvements as are essential to contentment and prosperity.

We need economy, but not the type of economy that penalizes the unfortunate while permitting more or less reckless expenditure of tax money in other departments and forced borrowing for relief.

The Municipal Indebtedness Act of 1913 placed our municipal finances on a sound basis. This Act was passed on the theory that indebtedness should be incurred only for some permanent improvement which had a life at least equal to, or in excess of, the term of the loan issued.

Subsequently, the Legislature provided that as a condition precedent to negotiating a loan, a municipality should make an annual contribution of a sum equal to twenty-five cents on each one thousand dollars of the assessed valuation.

In 1932, we found it necessary to deviate from well-established custom and permit borrowing to an amount not to exceed the increase of 1932 over 1929 in welfare, old age assistance, mothers' aid and soldiers' benefits expenses. In 1933, the costs of welfare increased instead of receding as a result of Federal cooperation. These have risen to a higher level, so that general expenses for 1936 were far in excess of those for 1929.

We hope they will decrease in the next few years, but we can hardly expect a return to the 1929 figures for some time to come.

Loan Problem

Therefore in arranging a loan program for 1937 we must recognize normal expenditures to be somewhat less than those of 1936 but far more than those of 1929.

In my opinion, whatever limitation is put thereon, it should [illegible] a condition that before a municipality can borrow for relief purposes, it must provide in its annual budget for a certain percentage of the amount expended for relief in 1936, or for a certain percentage of the average of the expenditures of 1933 to 1936.

I recommend appropriate legislation along these lines.

Massachusetts has always been in the vanguard of states which have sponsored progressive legislation. In keeping with her traditions she recently joined with our national government in embarking upon the new and extensive social security program which will bring peace of mind to so many of our citizens.

Permit me to call to your attention certain aspects of this program. Subsequently, it will be necessary for me to transmit a message to you with particular reference to the financing of its beneficent legislation.

At the last session of the General Court two substantial changes were made in the Old Age Assistance Act in order that our law might conform to the Federal Act, and thereby enable us to receive Federal grants. The first of these changes reduced the age limit for pensions from 70 to 65 years. This added thousands of persons to the eligible list.

Formerly the state contributed one third of the costs of the Old Age Assistance Act and the cities and towns, two thirds. By a second change the positions were reversed, and the Commonwealth is now required to contribute two thirds, and the cities and towns one third of the costs. Last year the Commonwealth reimbursed the cities and towns approximately $2,400,000. This revenue came from the liquor tax.

Cost Uncertain

At present it is difficult to determine the annual expense to the Commonwealth of old age pensions. It has been estimated that if the law remains as now written the total cost, when the peak is reached, will be $18,000,000 a year. In this event the Federal grant will be $9,000,000. The Commonwealth will pay two thirds of the remaining $9,000,000, which is $6,000,000.

I mention these facts to remind you of the magnitude of this problem, and to demonstrate the necessity for economy in all departments in order to prevent an increase in the state tax. Our government, state and national, has now made provision for the unemployed, the aged, and other less fortunate members of society. The cost of this legislation must be borne by the taxpayers. Let the interests of both groups be at all times our primary concern.

It is a matter of recording history that both the city of Boston and the States of New England owe their attainment and growth primarily to Boston Harbor. It was the tremendous commercial vitality of Boston Harbor which moulded the lives and founded the fortunes of successive generations.

Nature and three centuries of venturesome enterprise have built up the fame and the utility of the Port of Boston. Yet for several decades the people of Massachusetts came to forget its wonderful traditions and its marvelous possibilities.

The Boston Port Authority, established by the last session of the Legislature, has done much to awaken and quicken a general conviction that the development of the harbor holds great potentialities for the public good. The members of this Commission are all public-spirited citizens, familiar with the problems confronting them, and desirous of their solution.

What they have accomplished thus far is the result of exhaustive study and persistent effort. Further time and opportunity must be afforded them to complete the work they have begun.

I strongly recommend legislative action which will continue this Commission for another year.

State Fortunate

Massachusetts presents to the tourist a diversity of unexcelled climatic and recreational facilities, from the sand dunes and magnificent bathing beaches of Cape Cod to the natural beauty of the Berkshires.

Her historical associations are surpassed by no other state in the Union. Lexington, Bunker Hill, Faneuil Hall, and Plymouth are but a few of her famous shrines which have attracted and inspired sightseers from all over the world.

Of public land suitable for recreation, she possess more than one million, two hundred thousand acres. Thirty-five million people live within easy access of this extensive region; and last year over three million visitors spent lavishly in the enjoyment of its facilities.

I recommend that a suitable appropriation be made for advertising our recreational advantages; and that we co-operate, as far as possible, with the New England Regional Planning Board in making them more attractive and lucrative.

Closely related to this subject are the matters of conservation of our forests and preservation of fish and game. We now receive $100,000 annually in fees for sportsmen's licenses, which helps to defray the expenses of the Division of Fisheries and Game. This revenue can be increased by offering improved accommodations.

I recommend that these subjects be given your earnest consideration.

In 1931 and 1932 because of the collapse of our banking system through loss in investments and values in real estate, and because of unwise and reckless methods of management, the people of Massachusetts experienced the closing of sixteen trust companies and two savings banks in a period of less than fourteen months.

Since then, four other banks have failed and three have reopened, so that today the Department of Banks and Banking has supervision over nineteen institutions in process of liquidation.

Bank Problem

These institutions had deposit liabilities aggregating over $100,000,000, the savings of nearly 250,000 depositors of this Commonwealth. The problem which confronted the Department of Banks and Banking was how to realize for the depositors the largest possible amount in the shortest possible time at the least possible expense, with a minimum of damage to the existing banking structure.

More than five years have elapsed since many of these institutions ceased to function. The burden borne by the distressed depositors is actually greater today than it was in the dark days of 1933, when the assets of these institutions were frozen and the stability of our entire banking system was impaired.

According to the annual report of the Department of Banks and Banking, the cost of liquidation for 1933 was $610,470, and, amazing as it may appear, the cost in 1936 was $673,943, notwithstanding the fact that approximately seventy-five per cent of the deposit liabilities has been released.

The cost of legal services in the closed banks during the past two years was over $100,000. Almost $1,000,000 has been expended in legal fees during the period in which these banks have been in liquidation. These are startling figures.

It has been the practice of the Bank Commissioner to appoint lawyers as liquidating agents on the theory that they would perform the many legal duties incident to liquidation.

The irony of the situation is that these liquidating agents, themselves lawyers, in turn retain other lawyers, at tremendous expense, on routine legal matters. Thus, thousands of dollars in fees were paid, not only to the liquidating agents, but to the lawyers retained by them.

Many Victims

The victims of such a policy are the unfortunate depositors. As Governor, I shall insist that the Department of Banks and Banking take steps to reduce the cost of future liquidation, and expedite settlement of the affairs of the banks now closed at the earliest possible date, always with regard, however, for the interests of the depositors and the hardships they have endured for the past five years.

After a very active participation in the past two pre-primary conventions, I am of the opinion that this law has fallen short of producing the results which its sponsors so enthusiastically predicted.

In the first place, it has never aroused any general interest among the electorate. In 1932, when the question of its acceptance was submitted by referendum, 792,000 blanks were cast out of a total of 1,600,000 ballots. At the two pre-primary elections held under the law, only ten and fifteen per cent, respectively, of the registered voters took the trouble to go to the polls.

Despite the fact that each political party is entitled to at least one convention delegate from every town in the state, at the pre-primary election of 1934 the Democratic party failed to name delegates in forty-seven towns, and the Republican party, in seventeen towns. It cost the taxpayers approximately $300,000 for the two elections.

Again, any one who attended either convention of either party could not fail to observe that many of the discredited practices of years ago were still in operation. For example, activities were controlled and manipulated by small groups.

Delegates in the employ of the state were restrained, by fear and threat, from exercising a freedom of choice in the selection of candidates. Platforms submitted did not, and could not, get the consideration they deserved, since the delegates were extremely partisan, and were more concerned with the nomination of their favorite candidates than with the merits of the principles which they espoused.

It is perfectly plain that this pre-primary law, far from producing party solidarity, tends to develop personal cliques and organizations whose sole interest is the success of their leader.

An aspirant for state office must now campaign constantly for delegates who will be favorable to him. The delegates are elected in April; the conventions are held in June, and therefore the political year is thereby extended from four months under the direct primary to eight months under the new system.

These defects and abuses are intolerable.

Not long ago, when this question was being heard before a legislative committee, one of our outstanding educators declared:

"The people haven't the capacity for nominating candidates; choose between those who have been nominated."

I wish to say most emphatically that I do not subscribe to any such statement. I have confidence in the intelligence and judgment of the electorate of this Commonwealth. The direct primary, the democratic method of nominating our state officers, brought into service such illustrious public men as President Calvin Coolidge and Senator David I. Walsh.

No pre-primary endorsement was needed to demonstrate their qualifications to the people.

On every occasion presented to me, I have outspokenly opposed this law. It is unpopular. It is a wasteful expenditure of the taxpayers' money. It is undemocratic. It is destructive of party organization. It imposes a burden upon candidates for state office. It is wholly unnecessary.

I recommend most earnestly that the pre-primary law be repealed.

Biennial Sessions

Forty-two states of the Union hold biennial sessions of their Legislatures, and one state (Alabama) holds quadrennial sessions. I can find no substantial reason, therefore, why Massachusetts Legislatures should continue the present practice of meeting every year. These annual sessions usually extend from January to June, and occasionally, to July.

The Special Commission established in 1935 to study this question stated in its report:

"Nowhere else in the world, probably, is there a law-making body in session six months out of twelve every year."

It is estimated that $200,000 annually can be saved to the Commonwealth by the substitution of biennial for annual sessions.

Last year an initiative petition was filed, seeking an amendment to the Constitution of the Commonwealth providing for such a change. At the joint session of the Senate and House, this petition received the necessary affirmative votes and was referred to the incoming General Court.

Under the provisions of our Constitution, it must be considered by you at this session. If it again receives the necessary affirmative votes, the amendment shall be submitted to the people at the next state election.

I recommend that you take favorable action, in order to give our citizens an opportunity of expressing themselves on this important matter.

I have given considerable thought and study to the matter of premiums which the people of Massachusetts are required to pay for fire insurance protection.

It is my intention, in the immediate future, to arrange a conference with the executives of the various fire insurance companies doing business in the state, for the purpose of determining, in a spirit of friendly co-operation, what may be equitably accomplished, by way of a revision of rates which will be fair to the companies, and, at the same time, will afford some measure of relief to our already overburdened property owners.

Highway Safety

One of the most important problems in our country is the prevention of the killing and maiming of people by motor vehicles. In 1936, the death toll was over 37,000 and the number of injured reached the astounding total of more than 1,500,000.

In our Commonwealth alone, approximately 800 persons are killed each year, and nearly 50,000 are injured. Needless to say, fatalities and injuries seem inevitable. The most we can hope for is a reduction in their number.

Rigid enforcement of automobile laws, especially in connection with drunken driving and speeding on our highways, and closer co-operation between the office of the registrar of motor vehicles and the police departments of our cities and towns, would lead to an effectual solution of the problem.

Moreover, there can be no doubt that a system of education in all our public schools, through the medium of lectures by police officers, supplemented by motion pictures dealing with the hazards of motor traffic, would decrease the casualties among our school children.

Some of our cities have adopted this plan with excellent results. It has the advantage of both economy and efficiency.

Furthermore, legal procedure must be so conducted that the public will be convinced that violations are being prosecuted vigorously and impartially, and that so-called "fixing" is not being tolerated.

The indiscriminate slaughter and mutilation of our people every year on our highways is a matter of grave concern. It must be lessened; if humanly possible, it must be stopped. I pledge myself to an insistence on strict law enforcement in this direction, regardless of the parties involved.

Education

Education is a primary concern of the state. Whatever may be done for the dissemination of knowledge is an investment in sound citizenship. No commonwealth can make a more profitable contribution to progress than that which comes from the enlightenment of its people.

In these bewildering times, when the unwary and gullible are being constantly exposed to the influence of so many subversive doctrines, it is particularly necessary that barriers be set up to protect them against their own deficiencies.

While it is true that the instruction of our children is largely the business of local school authorities, it is provided in the Constitution (Chapter V, Section II) that Legislatures and magistrates shall cherish the interests of public schools.

Private facilities for advanced learning are fortunately so abundant in Massachusetts that the annual contribution of the state to higher education is comparatively small. We do, however, maintain ten Teachers Colleges, one State College and the Textile Schools, and the proper administration and diligent supervision of these institutions are our immediate responsibility.

Furthermore, in 1915, under the leadership of Governor David I. Walsh, we embarked upon a program of University Extension, and the work of this Division has been enriched and multiplied with the passage of time. Vocational training, specialized instruction for the physically handicapped, Americanization of aliens, and many other similar activities fall directly within our jurisdiction.

I urge the interest and co-operation of all branches of the government in the noble cause of elevating the mental status of our people, to the end that they may develop capacity for a copious, legitimate enjoyment of life, and proper perspective in their relationships with one another.

Mann Centennial

This year marks the 100th anniversary of the establishment of the Massachusetts Department of Education, chronologically first in the United States. It commemorates also the appointment of the first secretary of that department, Horace Mann, whose labors in behalf of free education and improved standards of instruction have immortalized his name.

I recommend that the General Court take official cognizance of this dual anniversary, which will attract nation-wide attention.

Leaders of thought everywhere are vitally interested in adult education. The Massachusetts Division of University Extension is the pioneer of all state services in this field. The annual class enrollments now average 30,000, and the work functions effectively in the larger centers of population.

There is an urgent need, however, for a careful study of present policies. The plan to render the division self-supporting has made it practically impossible to provide classes in sections of the state where large groups cannot be organized readily. I suggest the advisability of investigating this situation.

The subject of certification of teachers is debatable, but there is no escaping the fact that Massachusetts is the only state in the Union which has no certification requirements.

The best interests of our school children demand that we consider the feasibility of setting minimum standards for appointment to all teaching, administrative, and supervisory positions.

Federal Aid Due

Extraordinary opportunities are available under state and federal auspices for the training of both children and adults who suffer from any form of physical handicap.

Vocational education generally will be stimulated in 1937 by a decided increase in federal appropriations for this work. I call these facts to the attention of local school authorities, and urge them to participate more actively in the development of adequate trade-training facilities.

The steady decrease in enrollment in the public elementary schools indicates a corresponding decrease in the demand for teachers, and suggests the need of a survey of the facilities of our teacher-training institutions with a view toward possible correlation of their activities.

If the need for teachers can be effectively met in fewer centers, the remaining institutions may be used to provide high school graduates with useful courses in several fields.

There is an important phase of administration which has seriously disturbed the Governors of Massachusetts for many years. I refer to the problem of the mentally diseased. I would, first of all, call to your attention that the care of those unfortunately thus afflicted has normally absorbed about one quarter of the active income of the state.

I think it is only fair to say that none of my predecessors have ever begrudged the spending of this large proportion of our revenue. Certainly, I am, and shall continue to be, in entire sympathy with every reasonable request for appropriations toward this eminently worthy cause.

Review Needed

However, there has been for some years a definite sentiment in administrative circles that there should be instituted some form of legalized review and analysis of the affairs and of the plans of the Department of Mental Diseases.

Let me say at once, for the benefit of those who may have relatives or friends in our state hospitals, that the sentiment has not been engendered by reports of any physical abuse of the inmates of these institutions. On the contrary, our traditions in this regard are very high and very sound.

Specifically, there is reason to believe that the proper care of the mentally sick, for which the commonwealth holds itself duly responsible, is gradually being extended into fields where we cannot sensibly assume responsibility. There is in the public mind an ever-growing tendency, which has been deliberately fostered and directed, to throw upon the care of the commonwealth many who should and could be cared for at home.

The practical distinctions between the insane, the neurotic, the moronic and the retarded are being obscured, to all intents and purposes, so as to favor the shifting of humane responsibility for the care and the upbringing of all these types from the home to state institutions. Theory and practice are being most plausibly confused in the elusive name of science.

These constantly expanding operations of the Department of Mental Diseases are supported by what are practically the police powers of the state. As you can all see, we must be correspondingly on our guard against the possibility of officious error and injustice.

25,000 Involved

Already this department has tremendous authority over the lives of 25,000 of our people. Without a scientifically limited and publicly approved program, it is quite possible that, at some future day, the department may come under the control of a politically powerful group and who may define efficiency in terms of numbers of inmates and of unlimited extension of building operations and of personnel.

This brings me at once to the matter of finance. Our former Commissioner of Mental Diseases, on November 30, 1936, filed a series of requisitions which would have entailed the expenditure of $28,000,000—over two and one-half times as much as was spent y the department last year.

On submitting the details of these requisitions to a group of men trained b yeducation and experience in the practical and scientific aspects of the problem, I was informed that the program outlined was unsatisfactory in several important details—details involving the expenditure of millions of dollars of state funds.

In the light of these facts, I suggest that the Legislature empower me t oappoint a commission to consider the whole matter of the mentally diseased in their relation to the Commonwealth. I would have the members of this commission submit a complete program which would envisage our needs for the next decade, at least.

I would have them include in this program a correct outline of the obligations and of the rights of the Commonwealth in the light of modern, scientific knowledge and practice, and I would have them draw up a complete scheme of building operations sufficient to meet our requirements for years to come, eliminating all unbusinesslike or overlapping details caused by haphazard planning. Fragmentary handling of this problem is no longer excusable.

Wants Commission

Therefore, I respectfully request from your honorable bodies the power to appoint a commission of five members, composed of a competent specialist in mental diseases, a tried and skilled hospital administrator, a builder or an architect who understands well the material aspects of hospital construction, an outstanding medical man in general practice, and a jurist thoroughly acquainted with the problem of juvenile delinquency.

I ask that this commission be empowered to investigate all phases of the work of the Department of Mental Diseases, and that it be authorized and directed to engage in such study as will enable it to bring in for our consideration a complete, practical, and scientific plan for the wise handling of this problem in a systematic and truly state-wide fashion during the next ten years.

It is our hope that such a plan, wisely conceived and clearly developed, will serve as a directive norm for those who may be responsible for the work of this important department. It is my further hope that this plan may be a model for all those, whether at home or abroad, who are sincerely interested in the public care of the mentally defective.

Since 1884, we have had upon the statute books of Massachusetts a Civil Service Law. Its purpose, as has been well stated by the highest court in the Commonwealth, is "to secure efficiency in the public service and prevent discrimination in appointments to it based on any other consideration than fitness to perform it duties."

In effect, therefore, the Civil Service Law was enacted to substitute in the public service the "merit system" for the notorious "spoils system."

Under a literal application of the provisions of the law and of the Civil Service Board regulations, there were brought into the public service of Massachusetts trained and qualified men and women who have labored efficiently and honorably in the interests of the state and its cities and towns. This commendable situation met with general and enthusiastic approval.

Bad Condition

It is to be regretted, however, that successful efforts have been made to circumvent the law by placing upon the public payroll, under the protection of Civil Service, men and women lacking in the necessary qualifications, whose only claim to recognition is political.

This unhealthy condition has been brought about by liberal interpretation of the clauses dealing with non-competitive examinations, and by making provisional appointments to permanent positions and then extending the term of these appointments indefinitely.

The latter procedure usually culminates in non-competitive examinations for the favored holders of the provisional appointments, or in competitive examinations under conditions which give them an unfair and decided advantage over others seeking the positions.

HURLEY CITES WAYS TO CUT EXPENSES

The statute provides that "If there is no suitable eligible list, or if the Commissioner is unable to comply with a requisition in accordance with the rules of the Board, the Commissioner . . . may authorize a provisional appointment or may authorize the appointing officer or Board to select a suitable person who shall be subject to a non-competitive examination subject to the rules of the Board." (G. L., chapter 31, section 15.)

While these provisions were obviously intended to be used only in emergencies, they have been so freely construed by those interested that their use has frequently become a definite abuse and an obvious evasion of the plain purpose of the statute.

Merit Plan Best

I shall insist that those charged with responsibility for the administration of Civil Service shall carry out the letter and the spirit of its laws, and that the principles of the merit system shall be maintained both in appointment to and promotion in the public service.

Under existing statute, the police commissioner of Boston is appointed by the governor with the advice and consent of the council. For many years there has prevailed a respectable body of opinion that this procedure violates the general principles of home rule.

It is true that the duties of the police are under the control of locally chosen officials everywhere throughout the commonwealth, except in Boston and Fall River.

But it is also true that when the citizens of Fall River had submitted to them by referendum the question of home rule or state control, they voted overwhelmingly to retain the latter.

The problem of police management is naturally most complex in a cosmopolitan and metropolitan capital city.

While state control in Boston may seem to impair autonomy, and while it is thought by some to have originated in the design of a majority party in the Legislature to control an important function in a city usually dominated by a political party of another faith, it must nevertheless be remembered that, essentially, the police power resides in the state.

Plan Worked

Moreover, it appears that, for years while the department operated under an untrammeled state-appointed commission, there was no comity between the police and those in political life with those engaged in illegal or criminal enterprises.

In more recent times there has been evidence that such enterprises have frequently flourished in our midst without apparent interference. It is common knowledge that violations of law appear to have escaped detection and prosecution.

Politics has seemingly been playing a part in the police activities of Boston. This makes for demoralization of the department. Police and politics in combination constitute an unholy alliance which, in the end, would be destructive of the "protection, safety, prosperity, and happiness of the people," for which government is instituted.

There has been some thought that better results might be accomplished by placing at the head of the department one of its own trained officers. Such person, for obvious reasons, should not be chosen by his subordinates or associates; he must be selected by the mayor of Boston or by the Governor.

In either case, he would be the object of jealousies and lack of wholehearted co-operation on the part of those rejected. There would also be the danger of having an appointee who might instigate a cabal within the department itself.

If this appointee were named by the mayor, there is always the likelihood of intimacies between the one so chosen and those locally politically powerful. All this would be subversive of discipline and of contentment among those in service.

Example Important

With the rise in recent years of so-called racketeering, and with the apparent let down in morals so generally observable throughout the country, the problem of retaining an incorruptible police force and of securing the resolute apprehension and prosecution of offenders has become increasingly difficult.

High example at the top is needed to maintain faithful service in the ranks. If it lies in the minds of subordinates that their head is subject to political influences, it will be difficult to persuade them that they should not, in like manner, be considerate of such interests.

For some time there has been unrest in the police department of Boston. Frequent changes in the commissionership may be partly responsible. Some degree of permanence is essential to proper administration.

The commissioner, by whomever appointed, should be a man without political or other conflicting affiliations, one who possesses such ability, force, initiative and character as will gain him the confidence of his men and the public, and will entitle him, in the interests of the city and the state, to some measure of security in his tenure.

Hurley Plans to Study Police

Governor Hurley is going to make a thorough and earnest study of the "home rule" question as far as Boston's police commissioner is concerned. In the meantime, he said, he is going to hold the police commissioner to "strict accountability for rigid enforcement of the law."

I intend to address myself to a thorough an, earnest study of this subject, and will take or recommend such action as seems best.

In the meantime, while the present statute is in effect, it is my purpose to hold the police commissioner of Boston to a strict accountability for the rigid enforce of the law.

District Courts

In the Courts of our Commonwealth we have a noble heritage. A free and untrammeled judiciary is the safeguard of the state. Its maintenance as such is essential to the preservation of our splendid traditions.

To that end, the Courts, in accordance with the doctrine of the separation of powers wisely provided by our Constitution, must be kept aloof from all partisan political considerations.

That this may be accomplished, it is not only necessary that the executive and legislative branches of government should not encroach upon the powers committed to the judicial department, but also imperative that those in the judicial department should in turn refrain from participation in purely partisan political affairs.

Except in the case of a few special justices of district courts, there has been no such participation by the members of the judiciary. If a consciousness of the impropriety of such conduct, thus brought home to those who have offended, is insufficient to put an end to it, stronger measures should be taken to prevent its continuance in the future.

The practice of special justices appearing as counsel on the civil side of the courts to which they are attached has been the subject of justifiable criticism. Such practice cannot fail to create uneasiness on the part of litigants.

A litigant whose opponent is represented by a special justice of the court in which the case is pending is prone to believe himself at a disadvantage.

Confidence Vital

While he probably suffers no harm, yet, as has been so wisely said, in effect, by the honored and able Chief Justice of our Supreme Judicial Court, it is essential not only that justice should be administered, but also that it should be so administered that it will appear to have been properly administered.

This practice by special justices should cease, and, if not prohibited by rule of the Supreme Judicial Court, should be the subject of legislative prohibition in accordance with recommendations heretofore made by the Judicial Council and the District Court Commission.

As a more fundamental solution of these problems, I recommend that earnest study be made by the General Court of the feasibility of a reorganization of our district courts and a consolidation of the courts of less populous districts, together with the creation of a responsible head or heads, so that the standing justices of district courts may become full-time justices with adequate compensation, thus removing them from the private practice of law—a field of competition which they now enter with the added advantage of judicial title.

Moreover, the elimination of special justices is desirable for still another reason. Under a recent statute all automobile tort actions must be entered in the district courts.

While there is the right of removal to the superior court, we understand that the district courts, with few exceptions, are retaining about 75 per cent of these entries. Automobile accidents are the source of the greater part of our litigation today.

A special justice in private practice can hardly avoid being retained in some such cases, nor can he escape being called upon to negotiate with representatives of insurance companies. When he sits as a judge from time to time the same interests will be before him. This is undesirable.

Public Welfare

Public expediency demands that those who serve as judges shall not engage in the private practice law.

It is imperative that the standing judges of all our courts should be enabled, without anxiety or worry, to pursue their labors toward securing justice for those who come before them.

Measured by salaries and pension benefits paid in states of equal size and wealth, our jurists are not overpaid, and it would appear that their present retirement allowances are inadequate.

Moreover, there are inequalities in the provisions for retirement which should be corrected.

I recommend that legislation be enacted to restore to the standing judges of all our courts the privilege of voluntary retirement with adequate retirement allowances at 70 years of age, and that similar provision as to compensation be made in the case of standing judges retired by the governor and council for advanced age or physical or mental incapacity under the provisions of the constitutional amendment relating thereto.

This amendment provides that in case of voluntary retirement, judges shall be compensated in accordance with the provisions of law.

It may be seriously questioned whether the statutes subsequently passed, taking away the privilege of voluntary retirement of judges appointed after a certain date, and fixing the compensation of such judges, if retired under the amendment, at one-half pay as of certain dates, are constitutional.

I recommend the repeal of these later statutes and the passage of appropriate legislation providing for adequate retirement allowances for our judges.

Jury System

I commend also to the earnest consideration of the Legislature the recommendation of the judicial council, contained in its 11th report, that a study be made as to the desirability of a constitutional amendment providing that the Legislature may fix the number of jurors at less than 12 in civil and criminal cases, with the exception of capital cases.

It appears from that report that in civil cases tried in the superior court in a recent year, 30 per cent of the verdicts were for the defendants, and that in the remaining cases 30 per cent were for $300 or less; in 13 per cent the verdicts were not in excess of $1000, and in 30 per cent they were from $1000 to $5000.

The judicial council points out that cases of far greater importance, involving much larger sums, and others involving serious consequences in human relations, are tried without juries in equity and in the probate courts.

Cases of importance are also tried in the district courts without juries. It would seem that civil and criminal, except capital, cases could well be tried by juries of eight or six members, with a consequent saving to the counties of from $300,000 to $500,000. Possibly, juries of seven or five would be preferable.

Such a constitutional amendment would not conflict with the Constitution of the United States. A number of states have acted in this direction and provided for juries of less than 12.

With taxation weighing so heavily on the people, this means of reducing county expenses should be seriously considered.

Courts Citadel

In the protection of "life, liberty, and property according to standing law," the courts are the citadel of the people. "That there be an impartial interpretation of the laws and administration of justice," the judiciary, in the proper exercise of its powers, must and will be sustained and encouraged. (Constitution: Part One, Articles Ten and Twenty-four.)

It is my sincere hope that the government of our state be conducted for the next two years in a spirit of genuine and wholehearted co-operation. I feel that concerted effort is as essential as constructive thought to the proper management of public affairs.

Real service on our part demands a co-ordination of activity among the various executive, legislative, and judicial agencies, and between them and the many worthy groups which represent the diverse interests of our people.

Prejudice and injustice have no place in our deliberations. Political or class partisanship must not be tolerated. Government was created for the benefit of all, and no government can justify its existence which does not recognize this basic principle.

It is our plain and primary duty to devote ourselves to the common cause of maintaining and improving the functions we exercise, irrespective of selfish considerations. May it be said of us, two years from today, that Massachusetts is a better and a happier state because of the contributions we have made to her welfare.

To this philosophy I pledge myself to give all my thought and energy, and I pray God for the strength and courage to serve impartially, with you, the best interests of our people.

LIVES Parallel for CURLEYS

EX-GOVERNOR'S LIKE BRIDE'S

In a curious circle of circumstances, the marriage today of Governor Curley and Mrs. Gertrude Dennis united a couple born in the same community but never having met until three years ago.

Their birthday anniversaries are but one day apart—the Curley birthday on November 20, that of his bride on November 21.

Both came from families in moderate circumstances, both have done much church work, her father was a real estate dealer and the governor once was in real estate.

And both married and reared families, but lost their mates through death.

Today's bridegroom, whose marriage on the last day of his holding the gubernatorial post, made his bride the Commonwealth's First Lady for brief hours, was born at 28 Northampton street, Roxbury, on November 20, 1874.

His bride was born at 99 Regent street, Roxbury, not many blocks away, on November 21, 1882, the daughter of Richard L. Casey and Ellen Carney.

Both were educated in the Boston public schools, she becoming an accomplished pianist and singer, and becoming a saleswoman for a noted piano concern.

Wedded in 1921

Curley, after a period in the real estate business, turned to politics and was a Boston alderman when, on June 27, 1906, he married Mary Ellen Herlihy, a neighborhood girl he had met while both were teachers in the Sunday school of St. Philip's Church, Harrison avenue.

For 24 years they remained together in a beautiful romance before death took Mrs. Curley on June 10, 1930, following a long illness.

The first marital career of Mrs. Dennis had a far shorter life. On September 21, 1921, she was married to George Dennis of Third street, South Boston, a salesman and World War veteran.

On January 10, 1927, Dennis died at Peter Bent Brigham Hospital from automobile injuries suffered while on the way to a football game.

The following year she moved to 750 Centre street, Jamaica Plain, an address less than a five-minute walk from the Jamaicaway home of James M. Curley, whom she would marry—although neither knew that then and they had never met.

How many times their paths crossed at church and social affairs they probably will never know, but Curley frequently attended St. Thomas' Church, and that was her parish at the time.

They met finally—at a Christmas party for inmates at Long Island Hospital, while he was mayor—and the ends of the circle, which had been threatening long to close, were together at last.

Today's bride and bridegroom have much in common.

Wedding Breakfast To 75 Features Elaborate Cake

Amid a profusion of flowers, 75 guests partook of a wedding breakfast at the Jamaicaway home of ex-Governor Curley and his bride.

Mrs. Curley cut an elaborately designed confection, representing the wedding cake. As she did so, 100 small boxes containing fruit cake were disclosed, and these were distributed to the guests.

The bride and bridegroom, and members of their immediate families, sat at a main table, while the other guests were at tables set for four in several rooms on the first floor.

Bouquets of spring flowers were on all the tables and, on the main table, white roses, gardenias and white wisteria.

The orchestra played "The Isle of Capri," and "Aloha," favorites of the retiring governor, followed by many other popular tunes.

The breakfast consisted of three courses. The first was supreme fruit with maraschino cherries. Olives, celery and salted nuts were also served. The second course consisted of [illegible] with creamed mushrooms and white wine sauce, potatoes, olivettes and new peas. The third course was Bombe Brazilian, [illegible] frosted cake and demi-tasse.

There were no cocktails or wine, other than champagne, which was of a fine vintage year.

Curley Gift Is Diamond Bracelet

Governor Curley's wedding gift to his bride was a wide, diamond-studded bracelet.

The attractive bride wore it on her right wrist. The governor presented the bracelet to Mrs. Dennis when she arrived at his Jamaicaway home this morning prior to leaving for the ceremony at Boston College.

black belt with large oblong black buckle.

WEARS DIAMOND CROSS

The jacket had black revers, forming a velvet collar, and at her throat, on black background, she wore the diamond studded cross which Governor Curley gave her on Christmas, 1935.

Her hat was of black cellophane straw. She carried a bouquet of rare small white orchids and lilies of the valley.

On her right wrist she wore a diamond-studded platinum bracelet which the governor presented to her as a wedding present this morning.

BREAKFAST AT HOME

After the mass the couple had a light breakfast in the same building in which the chapel is situated, and went directly to the State House. The wedding breakfast took place later at the Curley home, 350 Jamaicaway, Jamaica Plain.

The Governor and Mrs. Dennis arrived at Boston College in the official S-1 car, accompanied by John J. Curley, associate commissioner of public utilities and brother of the Governor, and Mrs. Webster E. Howard of Winthrop, sister of Mrs. Dennis.

The early snow had changed to a heavy drizzle and the car moved slowly over the sleek pavement of Commonwealth avenue.

In advance of the car was another carrying Police Superintendent Edward W. Fallon and Captain John T. O'Dea, head of the traffic bureau. State Sergeant Arthur T. O'Leary rode in the front seat of the car which carried the bridal couple.

Thirty Newton police officers in command of Sergeant Bernard A. Meehan held the crowd back while the party entered St. Mary's building, on the left of the college drive, overlooking Chestnut Hill reservoir. Far beyond the reservoir, the buildings of Boston, over which Governor Curley has thrice presided as mayor and may aspire to rule again, could dimly be seen in the murk of the storm.

Governor Curley and Mrs. Dennis, and John Curley and Mrs. Howard, who were best man and matron of honor, walked down the right-hand aisle of the chapel, which has no center aisle, and took seats in the front row.

At a signal from Bishop Spellman, a few minutes later, they stepped inside the altar rail, and the Governor and Mrs. Dennis knelt on the carpeted stairs leading up to the altar.

NOW MAN AND WIFE

Standing above them, Bishop Spellman pronounced the words that made them man and wife. After the ceremony they returned to their seats with their attendants and the mass began. As both had been married before, the mass was technically not a nuptial mass, but an ordinary low mass.

Bishop Spellman was assisted by Rev. James F. Kelly, pastor of Our Lady of Lourdes Church, Jamaica Plain, which the governor has attended for years; Rev. Bernard J. [illegible], Sacred Heart Church, Newton, and Rev. William G. Logue, S. J., pastor of St. Ignatius Church, Boston College.

The acolytes were Charles Farrington and Joseph Carroll, scholastics of the Society of Jesus. William Power, S. J., was mitre bearer.

HAVE LIGHT REPAST

Governor and Mrs. Curley, and their attendants, knelt at the rail to receive Holy Communion.

The mass began at 10:15, and was over shortly after 10:30, after which the four principals retired to an anteroom and had a light breakfast, having fasted since midnight in order to receive Holy Communion.

When they stepped outside, they almost had to force their way through the crowd, in spite of the presence of the police. There was handclapping for the bride and cheers for both.

Mrs. Dennis met the governor this morning at his home, to which she rode in the S-1 car, which called for her at her residence, 1894 Beacon street, Brookline.

She was accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Howard, who wore a burgundy suit, with hat to match and a long squirrel coat. Both Mrs. Dennis and her sister wore shoulder sprays of orchids.

She smiled and posed for photographs. Before she left, Brigadier-General William I. Rose arrived in his National Guard automobile into which four pieces of new baggage were loaded.

Her two small sons watched from a window as she departed and they attended the wedding later, accompanied by their grandmother, Mrs. Eleanor Casey.

At the Jamaicaway home of the governor, the bride-to-be went inside and was presented with her wedding gift. The couple posed for pictures.

TASTILY DECORATED

The house had been prepared for the wedding breakfast, with tables set for four in the reception hall, library, sun room and other rooms on the first floor. It was profusely and tastily decorated with lilies, azaleas, cyclamen, acacia, white roses, gardenias and wisteria.

Gifts and flowers were still arriving by special messenger as the bridal party left for the church.

Five Boston police, led by Sgt. Joseph Weckbecker, kept a group of spectators at a reasonable distance from the house and saw that motor cars on Jamaicaway continued moving, in spite of the evident desire of the occupants to watch the proceedings.

Inside the house, seven state officers stood guard over the presents, many of which had not been opened and cannot be for some time. Among the presents, it was understood, were four complete silver services, and the total number of gifts was so many that no one had attempted to count them.

Mrs. Edward C. Donnelly, only daughter of Governor Curley, arrived just as her father and his bride-to-be were leaving, and shouted "Hello" to them from her car.

Later, in the corridor leading to the chapel, the Governor greeted his daughter with a kiss.

Mrs. Donnelly wore a black velvet ensemble with a princess wrap over her velvet gown which had a bodice of red and silver lame.

She had a seat near the front of the chapel with her husband, Paul Curley and his bride, and George, Leo and Francis, the Governor's other sons.

FAMILY OF BRIDE

In the opposite front pew were the family of the bride, including her mother, Mrs. Casey, her brother, Richard L. Casey, both of 1894 Beacon street, Brookline; and the two boys, George Dennis, 11, and Richard, 13.

The church was decorated with flowers. The main altar was banked with white lilies and pale yellow acacias, against a background of ferns. Eight side altars were similarly decorated. The pews were marked with sprays of lilies tied with silver streamers.

The ushers were Major Joseph F. Timilty, the Boston police commissioner; Brigadier General Rose, and Dr. Martin English, physician for the Curley family, and Joseph Coppenrath. Governor Curley presented them with gifts, Major Timilty's being a platinum wrist watch, with tiny rubies and diamonds marking the figures on the dial.

Mrs. John J. Curley, who was among the guests, wore a gown of brown satin and crepe, a mink coat, brown hat and corsage of orchids. Mrs. Edward C. Donnelly, Sr., mother-in-law of Mary Curley Donnelly, was also very attractively gowned.

During the mass the Ave Maria by Bach-Gounod and "Air for G-String" by Bach were played by Harry E. Dixon, violin soloist. The organist was Mrs. Adeline Gainey, cousin of the bride.

Bride's Attire Features Beige

This is the attire which the bride of Governor James M. Curley wore today:

A traveling ensemble of beige, black and fur.

She wore a longe beige wool coat, trimmed with lynx its full length. Under the coat was a black wool dress, surmounted by a Tyrolean jacket of beige, with black edging, three large black buttons and a black belt with large oblong black buckle.

The jacket had a black revers, forming a velvet collar.

At her throat, on a black background, was the diamond-studded cross which the former Mrs. Dennis received from Governor Curley on Christmas, 1935.

Her hat was of black cellophane straw. Her coat had four-inch cuffs, and she carried beige-colored gloves and a small embroidered handbag.

'Good Luck,' President's Message

One of the prized possessions of Governor Curley on his wedding day was the congratulatory message from President Roosevelt. It read:

"Honorable James M. Curley, State House, Boston.

"My greetings to you and your bride on your wedding day. All the happiness and good luck in the world.

"(Signed) Franklin D. Roosevelt."

CROWDS IN RAIN CHEER BRIDAL PARTY

The invited guests at Governor Curley's wedding today were:

Carroll Carney, Miss Dorothy Carney, Mr. and Mrs. James H. Carney, Miss Mary Carney, Mr. and Mrs. Michael F. Carney, Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Carney, Miss Agnes Casey, Arthur H. Casey, Mr. and Mrs. Richard L. Casey.

Spellman, Mrs. Mary Terry, Police Commissioner Joseph F. Timilty, Miss Beatrice Whelton, Mrs. John B. Whelton and Mr. and Mrs. Stanton R. White.

Girl, Youth Collapse Outside Chapel

A Newton girl and a Boston College student collapsed today at Boston College during the wedding of Governor Curley and Mrs. Dennis.

They were overcome by fumes from the exhaust of a car while waiting outside Boston College chapel to see the Governor emerge with his bride.

The identity of the girl was not learned. She was taken to her home in Hammond street, nearby.

The student is James Ryder of Dorchester.

Both, nearly unconscious, were assisted into a waiting room in the chapel building. Dr. Theodore Brown, the college physician, applied restoratives.

January is Value Month at PAINE'S

Right now you can choose from the immense Paine variety at

LEADERSHIP LOW PRICES

Right now golden furniture opportunities are yours at our low January prices. Not job lots. Not furniture made to sell at a price. Not old, unwanted goods that some manufacturer had to dispose of at a loss. But Paine standard quality. Styleright. Uncommon. Furniture of integrity that will give substantial service. A wise investment. This dependable furniture is still priced for a limited time at old levels.

In Spite of the ADVANCING MARKET

You know as well as we that prices cannot always remain where they are today. Labor—the big item in manufacturing—is receiving higher wages. Every commodity used in furniture is costing more. You may just as well reconcile yourself to these conditions. Neither you nor we made them or can control them.

What WE can do and are doing is: selling you the same high quality as always at fair prices—raising ours only when and as we have to pay more.

What YOU can do—and we believe should as a measure of foresight—is buy what you need NOW and thus SAVE the toll of advances.

Our leadership position in furniture enables us now as heretofore to buy advantageously—to get more for our money and thereby give you more for yours.

Our volume operating leverage is and will continue to be exerted to obtain for our patrons foremost values. And whatever the price Paine quality is always as represented. We do not sell merchandise we cannot conscientiously recommend.

Here's an example of what we mean!

3 pieces Butt WALNUT January price $154

CONGRESS HEADS IN PARLEY EXTEND ROOSEVELT POWER

Washington, Jan. 7 (INS)—The Democratic leadership of Congress today agreed at a conference with administration officials to extend the life of the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund, the President's power to devaluate gold, and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation until June 30, 1939.

Senator Robinson, Democratic leader of the Senate, revealed after the conference that three bills would be introduced immediately to extend these federal emergency agencies and enacted before February 1.

The conference was attended by Robinson, Speaker Bankhead of the House, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, Federal Reserve Governor Marriner S. Eccles, RFC Chairman Jesse Jones, Budget Director D. W. Bell, Rep. Rayburn, Democratic leader of the House; Senator Harrison, chairman of Senate Finance Committee; Senator Glass (D) of Virginia, banking authority; Rep. Doughton, chairman of House Ways and Means Committee, and Rep. Steagall, chairman of House Banking and Currency Committee.

CLAUSE IN RFC BILL

In addition to extending the life of the RFC, the congressional leaders also agreed to extend four of its subsidiaries, the RFC Mortgage Co., the Import-Export Bank, the Commodity Credit Corp., and the Electric Home and Farm Authority.

A clause will be written into the bill, however, giving the President power to cancel their lending activities at any time he finds private credit ample to meet industrial needs.

The Treasury's authority to use certain securities as the basis for issuing currency also will be extended.

Robinson's announcement said:

"It is expected as a result of this conference that three bills covering these subjects will be introduced at an early date and considered prior to February 1.

EXTENSION TO JUNE, 1939

"The extension of the RFC, its mortgage company, the Import-Export Bank, the Commodity Credit Corporation and the Electric Home and Farm Authority, will be until June 30, 1939.

"This bill will probably contain a clause giving the President power if he finds at any time that sufficient private credit is available, to issue a proclamation discontinuing the activities of these agencies.

"With respect to the statute relating to securities as the basis for the issuance of Federal Reserve notes, it is anticipated that the bill will provide for an extension of this power until June 30, 1939.

"The third bill to embrace continuance of the stabilization fund and the authority of the President respecting the gold content of the dollar, will also provide for an extension until June 30, 1939."

$80,000 Bail Set For Pair in Police Beating Case

Bail totaling $80,000 will have to be furnished by relatives or friends if they desire to release Fred Guerall, of Auburn, N. H., and Joseph Farina of Addison street, Chelsea, from the Charles street jail.

The high bail of $40,000 each was ordered by Judge John Perrins in West Roxbury court, where the two men faced charges of assault with intent to kill Officer Patrick Garrity and John H. Fisher of the police special service squad.

The two men entered no pleas and were ordered held for grand jury action.

Richard Guerall, of Princeton street, East Boston, a brother of Fred Guerall, was still in a serious condition at City Hospital, suffering from injuries sustained when he attempted to resist arrest.

The three men are alleged to have beaten and then pushed the [illegible] officers from their speeding automobile at Peters Hill on Wednesday morning.

'LOVE TRIANGLE' VICTIM DIES

Joseph Speranza, 32, of Chestnut street, Saugus, who allegedly was shot by a relative following a "love triangle" several weeks ago, died at Haymarket Relief Hospital today.

Police charged Vincent Bianco, 29, of [illegible] street, North End, a cousin, with murder.

Arraigned in municipal court before Judge Elias Bullock, Bianco was held without bail until January 21.

He testified he shot Speranza in self-defense and in defense of his home, stating that the Saugus man was too attentive to his wife.

British Blockade Plan Delayed; Fleet Massed

By Associated Press

London, Jan. 7—Great Britain, with a warning eye on her mighty fleet massing in Spanish waters, looked to Germany and Italy today for a "constructive" answer to its demands for non-intervention in the Spanish civil war.

Observers pointed out British men-of-war were moving toward Spain in sufficient numbers to enforce a blockade of the peninsula should such action become necessary.

At the same time a statement in Glasgow by Sir Thomas Inskip, defense coordination minister, that there would be no army conscription during peacetime was taken to mean Britain was ready to draft soldiers immediately peace was endangered.

The British position to enforce isolation of Spain's "little World War" was considered in informed circles to be strengthened through American action to bar shipments of armaments to both sides.

Fears had been expressed that any European action might be made ineffective through ability of the belligerents to obtain aid in the United States.

Congressional action to strengthen American neutrality laws by removing loop-holes through which factions in a civil war might obtain aid was felt definitely to have placed the problem in the hands of Europe.

Italian, German Replies Given Britain, France

Rome, Jan. 7 (INS)—Italy's reply to the Anglo-French appeal for a ban on flow of "volunteers" into Spain was handed this evening to Sir Eric Drummond, British Ambassador, and the charge d'affaires of the French embassy. The note will be made public at midnight.

The reply was believed to be worded identically like that of Germany, and was believed to set forth the view that Italy would cooperate with other nations, probably through the nonintervention committee.

The Italian stand was believed to be, however, that a practical solution is virtually impossible.

Berlin, Jan. 7 (INS)—The German reply to the Anglo-French demarche on Spain was sent to the British and French ambassadors at 6 p. m.

Insurgents Drive Reds Back Into Madrid

With Fascists Outside Madrid, Jan. 7 (AP)—Spanish insurgents fought their way to the suburbs of Madrid from a new sector today and were reported to have occupied the railroad station and surrounding buildings at Pozuelo de Alarcon, five miles northwest of the capital.

Driving from recently captured Las Rozas on the Madrid-El Escorial highway, the Fascist troops advanced, steadily pushing the capital's defenders along the road before them.

Suddenly at Pozuelo, the insurgent commanders said, the Socialist resistance seemed to crumble.

Irish Fighters Marooned As Spanish Ship Delays

Dublin, Jan. 7 (INS)—Several hundred Irish volunteers planning to join the Spanish rebel army were marooned in a little fishing village in county Waterford today when the Spanish ship supposed to transport them failed to arrive.

Assassin Suspect Seized by French

Metz, France, Jan. 7 (AP)—Police said today a man held here was a member of the notorious Ustachi ring of international terrorists alleged to have planned the assassination of King Alexander of Yugoslavia and Foreign Minister Louis Barthou of France at Marseille in October, 1934.

He was arrested aboard a train at Thionville Monday, two days before Alexander's widow, Queen Marie, and her son, Prince Tomislav, eight, passed through en route to London.

SENATE ERROR STARTS NEW $4,507,000 ARMS RACE

Washington, Jan. 7 (AP)—A parliamentary knot which held up signature of the speedily-enacted Spanish arms embargo gave rise today to the possibility of another race to ship war materials to the Loyalist army.

House and Senate jammed through the embargo late yesterday with only one dissenting voice, but a technicality may keep President Roosevelt from signing it into law until tomorrow afternoon.

Before that action could make the shipment illegal, Richard Dineley, San Francisco munitions dealer, hoped he might be able to get a $4,507,000 cargo of planes and arms en route to Spain.

One shipment of planes by Robert Cuse of Jersey City was carried from New York on a Spanish freighter yesterday while the embargo resolution was rushed through Congress at a pace reminiscent of the emergency banking bills four years ago.

WAITS FLYING SPANIARDS

Dineley, ready to take advantage of the delay, said he could get his goods on the sea in 24 hours, but that he had to wait for Spanish officials flying here from Mexico City. Bad weather delayed them.

Administration leaders, deciding at the last minute to try to halt Cuse's shipment, offered the embargo resolution in both House and Senate after President Roosevelt finished his address in mid-afternoon.

The measure, blocking export of arms or munitions to either side in the Spanish civil war, zipped through the Senate 80 to 0. The House later approved it 403 to 1, and both bodies adjourned until Friday.

RED TAPE TIES GARNER

The Senate, however, had failed to authorize Vice-President Garner to sign the resolution outside of a session. That keeps it from the White House until the Senate convenes again.

House action was slowed down by an objection from Representative Bernard (F-L-Minnesota), a new member, who later cast the sole vote against the measure.

The embargo resolution as approved provides $10,000 fine and five years imprisonment.

It is a mandatory ban, but the administration did not object to this feature. President Roosevelt, however, is seeking broad discretionary powers under the forthcoming general neutrality bill.

3 BOYS HELD IN VANDALISM

Captured at gun-point after they had caused thousands of dollars worth of damage during a shooting spree in a closed country mansion in Wayland, three Greater Boston boys, 13 to 15 years old, were held in $1000 bail each on five serious charges today.

In Framingham district court's juvenile session they were charged with breaking and entering, unlawful possession of firearms, destruction of property, larceny of an automobile and larceny. They will be tried Monday.

The boys, residents of Dorchester and Hyde Park, broke into the country home of Frank C. Paine, architect, now in Europe, and used tapestries, oil paintings, windows, walls and the caretaker's dog for targets.

Liberty League Owes $77,743

Washington, Jan. 7 (INS)—The American Liberty League ended the calendar year of 1936 with its budget out of balance by $77,743.12, it was revealed today when its final report for the year was filed in the House of Representatives. The report listed disbursements at $518,212.12.

Court Exonerates Harvard Student As 'Peeper'

A Harvard sophomore honor student was completely exonerated by Judge Robert Walsh in East Cambridge district court today on a charge of disturbing the peace after he had been beaten by a group of Cambridge youths.

He was arrested by Cambridge police in connection with allegedly peeping into the window of a Grant street home.

The youth testified he was chased by four boys and struck and kicked by one of them.

He denied looking into the window, but said he had taken a short cut through an alley on Grant street on his way to his rooms.

Charles R. Apted, superintendent of Harvard police, said he was called to Leverett House and found "eight or nine policemen" there. He said the student's face was cut.

"It seems to me the defendant was sufficiently discouraged in his short cut without intervention by the police. It seems strange that no police report showed that there were marks on the boy's body."

LIQUOR PERMIT DECISION DUE

Decision is expected to be announced by the Boston licensing board today on the petition for a seven-day liquor license at a proposed restaurant in Huntington avenue, Roxbury, which was opposed by 25 Mission Church parishioners, headed by the Rev. George A. Conway, pastor.

Keith Holds Pons Film

Lily Pons' second picture, "That Girl From Paris," in which she is co-starred with Gene Raymond and Jack Oakie, is being held over for a second week at the Keith Memorial, beginning today, by popular demand.

The tiny Gallic songbird, whose five-foot frame houses one of the world's greatest operatic voices, exhibits a delightful sense of comedy in her current film-hit, indulging in a bit of slapstick now and then that would lift the tiaras from the Met's diamond-horseshoe dowagers if she should absent-mindedly revert to it while doing one of her celebrated arias one of these nights.

Movie fans attending "That Girl from Paris" are enchanted with her lovely vocalization of the three popular airs by Arthur Schwartz and Edward Heyman.

GEORGE HOLLAND

[illegible] ORGANIZED LOBBY for a later closing hour in Boston [illegible] for a late afternoon [illegible] today. [illegible] Owners [illegible] night clubs and [illegible] were [illegible] at the State [illegible] to consider a [illegible] the sale of liquor [illegible] o'clock in the morning on weekdays and midnight [illegible] until 2 o'clock in the morning [illegible] a 2 o'clock closing hour [illegible] to all days of the week [illegible]

Underdone:

The [illegible] Patricia Lindsay, who once wrote and "stooged" for Frisco, the cigar-smoking comic, is in town, and had the pleasure of visiting with a newly-rich gentleman whose interior decorator had lavished everything from [illegible] Tarzan to neo-Colonial on the overstuffed mansion he had prepared for his bride.

She was shown his gorgeous music-room, which impressed her so tremendously that she exclaimed:

"What? Only one piano!"

Once Over Lightly:

It [illegible] of New York, and also of Boston . . . "Dear George: I have just got in from New York to publicize Miss Helen Gleason, star of 'Frederika,' for the balance of her engagement . . . The biggest hit in New York is 'You Can't Take It With You,' at the Booth Theater, and Sam Harris, who is in Boston, owns it . . . Newest after-theater rendezvous is the Georgian Room in the Piccadilly Hotel, where Dave Schooler is ensconced with his dance orchestra, and personal stars floor revue . . . You may remember Dave from his Boston engagements here . . . On New Year's Eve, many New York night-clubs and restaurants slew the golden goose . . . Not only were prices tripled in many cases, but you could not check your clothes without paying an advance of from 25 to 50 cents . . . Even the Chinese [illegible] with a usual minimum of 25 cents, raised the prices to $1.00 and $1.50 . . . Ruby Foo, the Boston girl, by the way, [illegible] the town's finest Oriental [illegible], and [illegible] to get a table late at night in her Den [illegible]

The Postman Comes Late:

It couldn't have been delayed in the mail, because the postmark reads Jan. 5 . . . Nevertheless, it being a sort of letter-day in this space, the following is submitted as sent, with the original signature

[illegible]

Chatter:

Dan Elser, [illegible] Shamrocks star back, has been unreported to Boston friends for several weeks, and if the marriage has not occurred already, it is imminent . . . The girl is a Southern girl and the romance is of years' duration . . . The speediest recovery of a stolen car in the history of the police department came when a truck belonging to a Tremont street meat company was found in 23 minutes . . . And Francis P. [illegible] O'Neill, "The POlicemen's Friend," will be very disappointed if the annual awards for merit to Boston policemen do not include at least three members of Dep. Supt. William Livingston's "Special Service" squad . . . The awards will be made at the policemen's ball in Mechanics building . . . Hope Damon, playing a character role in "Frederika," is the girl who sang the [illegible] at the Cocoanut Grove's Melody [illegible] a few months ago . . . "Outside of the United States," as Variety puts it, Shirley Temple is the most "potent" box-office name, Gary Cooper is second and Clark Gable takes the show position . . . Ken Murray played his last show at the Keith-Boston last night with an attack of influenza which threatens cancellations for a week [illegible]

Japanese Folk Tale: Chick Chin Sends Word From Formosa

AUSTEN LAKE

A BELATED CHRISTMAS CARD post-marked "Formosa" comes to Chick Chin, the Japanese golfer whom I met with [illegible] Tommy Toda, during the Sunshine Open at St. Petersburg, Fla., last March. It is a gay, heathenish card with a bright flap of rice paper and unrelated to the Yule season except for the cramped scrawl on the back, "Wishing you Christmas fortunes" and signed "Chin."

Being Buddhist and with the [illegible] Christian custom, [illegible] a graceful thing for Chin to [illegible] because of a [illegible] St. Pete water [illegible] I were [illegible]

The candles were burning low and for some reason, [illegible] Chin told a folk tale of his native Formosa which had nothing to do with golf but which I find amid my mental rubbish [illegible] clearly where other impressions are [illegible] tangle. You wouldn't find Horton Smith or Lawson Little or any of our top flight golfers [illegible] anything so naive lest they be snatched for [illegible] company. I think [illegible] to mistake callousness for composure and mistrust gentleness for the [illegible]

"One dark night," said Chin, and he had prominent front [illegible] his lips in a perpetual smile . . .

CHIN TELLS A TALE

"ONE DARK NIGHT," SAID CHIN, "A TRAVELER came to an old country inn in Formosa, which as you know is a Japanese island where camphor comes from. He lay down to sleep but was awakened by faint whispers of children's voices, thinking perhaps that a little boy was lost, he rose and lit a candle. But the room was quite empty.

WHERE EAST MEETS WEST

"OVER AND OVER (SAID CHIN) THEY would whisper the same question until they fell asleep. Then one night the landlord, who said Chin was a very ugly fellow, came and demanded his rent, which, though it was only a few pennies, the children did not have. So he took their blanket and turned them out.

Program on WNAC Starts at 7:30

By JOE CASHMAN

Tonight's the night, fans.
The big baseball thrill of the winter.

Fred Hoey, Eddie Collins, Bob Quinn and Austen Lake on the Boston Sunday Advertiser's Sports Parade program to be broadcast over Station WNAC [illegible] from 7:30 to 7:45 p. m.

[illegible]

New England's [illegible], appearing before the "mike" for the first time since the close of the past big league [illegible], also of course, will talk [illegible] himself to his legion of friends and admirers whose [illegible] support won back his [illegible] broadcasting berth after it appeared lost.

[illegible]

Naturally you won't miss tonight's big broadcast starting at 7:30 through the facilities of Station WNAC. You simply can't afford to. It's the latest in baseball chatter you want to hear.

HANEY ON CONGRESS

Trial Balloons

BEING SENT UP

By Administration

By LEWIS HANEY

Professor of Economics, New York University

New York, Jan. 7—As Congress meets, we note various trial balloons arising in the neighborhood of Washington.

These are doubtless sent up to test public sentiment, so that the administration will know to what it can safely commit itself.

For example, an assistant Secretary of the Department of Commerce is allowed by headquarters to come out with a prepared statement in favor of changing the anti-trust laws.

At about the same time, no less a person than Senator Robinson issues a statement in favor of amending the Constitution so as to permit the federal government to control wages and hours of employment.

In both cases, the administration must have sanctioned the issuance of the statements.

In both cases, the idea is to see how people react to the suggestions.

In both cases, the suggestion is to change in a fundamental way both our political and our economic systems.

In other words, the quarterback is about to call another play.

The first "trial balloon" proposal would amend the anti-trust laws so as (1) to allow business men to enter binding agreements with one another; and (2) to set up another new government bureau (Heaven help us!) to tell business men in advance what the law means and what they can do under it. (This would practically put the courts out of office.)

The statement makes the old and untrue charge that the anti-trust laws are unintelligible, out of date and absurd and that they prevent desirable co-operation.

Business men who want private monopoly and price fixing, however, will be disappointed. The statement adds that there would be no private production or commodity price agreement.

You see, the scheme is for the purpose of enabling the formation of a new national recovery act set-up and the only co-operation really contemplated is to enable employers to agree to fix and maintain wages and hours. (Of course, this would be subject to control by the politicians who want laborers' votes.)

One difficulty would still confront the Washington politicians in their desire to control business through government control over agreements as to wages and working conditions.

There would be the problem of enforcing the agreements, and compelling business men who didn't want to enter them.

This is where Senator Robinson's suggestion of a Constitutional amendment comes. Through him, in my opinion, Mr. Roosevelt has started his old urge to establish a collectivist government at Washington which could control all business by controlling all labor.

In the light of supreme court decisions, the administration cannot regulate wages and hours of labor, because that would mean control over commodity prices and industrial production.

It is obviously impossible to control wages unless the price of the product is also controlled. It is obviously impossible to control working hours without controlling output.

Conversely, if the constitution were to be amended to give the new dealers such power, they would try to force all business men to submit to centralized political control.

It begins to seem well that the matter of amending the constitution be brought up for public discussion. Surely many of us must feel that it is high time to decide the issue that has lurked in the background ever since recovery began a year and a half ago when the supreme court ruled the National Recovery Act out.

This issue we can decide now on its merits, without involving the election of Mr. Roosevelt.

Do we want federal politicians and Washington "Bureaus" to run the business and economic life of the nation?

If we do, we will have to change not only the constitution, but our whole economic system.

The constitution insures against dictation by the executive and thus insures democracy.

Democracy means individual participation in political control and individualism in economic life. Individualism means competition and requires the anti-trust laws.

These things are all of one piece.

In view of results attained in Europe by collectivism, I think that, for quite a while yet, we had better stick to our democracy, our individual initiative, our anti-trust laws and our constitution.

CITES Ten-Point PLAN

FUTURE OF FARMER BRIGHT

By EDWIN B. HAAKINSON

Washington, Jan. 7 (AP)—Secretary Wallace outlined today a ten-point program for keeping America's 30,000,000 farmers on a par with business and industry.

"Agriculture is no longer the forgotten industry of the United States," he said, citing a four-year rise in estimated farm income from $5,500,000,000 to $9,000,000,000.

The farmer's income has returned to its pre-war parity with urban incomes, Wallace said, declaring he will seek to maintain that relationship.

His program:

1—Free opportunity for farmers to organize.

2—Fair and stable income for the farmer, on an equal with city incomes.

3—Supplies of farm goods adjusted to adequate home needs and foreign demand.

4—Foreign policies to encourage peace with other countries and and expanding market abroad for American farm products.

5—Conservation of the soil and other natural resources.

6—Turning below-standard land to non-farm uses.

7—Crop insurance, to cushion the shock of drouth, flood, frost and plague, combined with the ever-normal granary.

8—Better opportunities for the man with the hoe to own his land and increased security for tenants and owner-operators.

9—A higher standard of living for the poorer farmers.

10—Industrial policies to insure abundance for wage-earners and farmers alike.

Only two dangers threaten the farmer's future, farm experts said—a European war or another drouth. Drouth again would strain credit and relief resources in some regions, they predicted.

A plan for the government to insure farm crops is on the President's desk. The insurance would start only in wheat in 1938, but administration leaders say Congress may include cotton and corn.

The President has indicated he would press for aid to the nearly 3,000,000 tenant farmers, varying from southern cotton sharecroppers to renters of fertile corn belt acres.

Some congressmen have plans to set up a government corporation to supply land and credit for deserving tenants, but Secretary Wallace favors improvement of landlord-tenant agreements.

The Soil Conservation Act, passed by Congress after the Supreme Court voided the original AAA, is distributing $470,000,000 in benefit payments to farmers who participated last year. Payments of $500,000,000 are planned for this year.

STUDY Economic OUTLOOK

CONSENSUS OF VIEWS

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

Copyright, 1937, Universal Service

New York, Jan. 7—What do competent Wall Street financiers talk about nowadays when they let their hair down, and chat candidly among themselves?

I got an answer to this question at a private luncheon of eminent bankers, brokers, and analysts.

Though officially and publicly they disclaim the role of the prophet, they find it necessary in their day-to-day activities to make tentative forecasts of what is coming.

At this meeting, a consensus of views was developed. It was that the economic outlook in the United States, apart from current strikes and possible political disturbances, was good. In fact, the hard-boiled conclusion was that the net result, despite obvious obstacles, would be a further expansion in economic activity.

As for interest rates, the average view was that money is now scraping bottom, and that, when a significant change came, it would be toward stiffening of rates. On the other hand, though short time rates might harden somewhat, the expectation was that money would be substantially cheap throughout 1937.

The opinion was expressed that Treasury needs in respect to funding floating debt would be a factor making for continuing cheap money, though there would be a moderate offset in expanding business activity. The thought was articulated that long term money rates would rise after short term rates had significantly stiffened.

Politically, the expectation was that the logical sequence of events would tend to make President Roosevelt a moderating influence. The view was expressed that the Chief Executive's dominant motive would be to consolidate reforms and to avert extreme moves which might jeopardize the recovery.

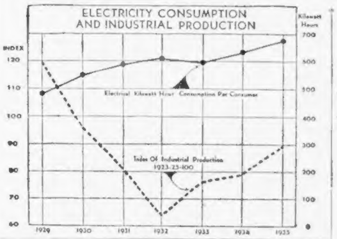
Subject to such a limiting factor, he might talk and act progressively as the realities will permit. The expectation was that there would be a flood of radical bills introduced, but that the passage of significant legislation would depend on the wishes of the White House.

In substance, the conclusion was that politics might be expected in the coming weeks to have a shock quality, but that new legislation would not reverse the basic trend of recovery.

Internationally, the consensus was that there would be no general war in 1937, and probably none for several years.

As for labor, there was a feeling that the insurgent union forces had struck at the very flower of American industry, rather than at a particularly vulnerable point. There was a feeling that a probable type of adjustment might tend to raise production costs somewhat. One view was that a temporary cessation of production would have an offsetting benefit in working off the inventory of used cars.

ELECTRICITY



RATES OFF

Residential Consumer Use Up

During the depression when business was sliding downhill and reduced incomes forced the general public to practise rigid economies, it would be natural to expect a decline in the amount of electricity used by the average residential consumer.

However, this was not the case and the chart proves it.

With the exception of a slight decline in 1933 the amount of electricity used by each individual consumer has increased every year since 1929.

Assuming that industrial production is a good index of general business conditions, the chart shows that residential electricity consumption ran directly counter to the trend of business during the latter's slump.

Several factors have contributed to this increase in the consumption of electricity. Rates have been reduced. Sales of electric household appliances have been well sustained despite the depression. Between 1930 and 1934 the capacity of all the new appliances sold totaled 28,940,000 kilowatts.

Wall Street Sidelights

New York, Jan. 7—Coal producers are looking forward to the best first quarter this year since 1929, as a variety of factors combine to stimulate output.

First, the emergency freight surcharge which lifted coal rail rates 10 per cent on long hauls, has been removed. When this surcharge expired on Jan. 1 of this year, a big tonnage of coal backed up at the mines awaiting the lower rate, started moving to users. Second, the coal union contracts expire April 1, and industrial users as a matter of ordinary precaution always build up their stocks at such times, just in case coal mine strikes over wage contract renewals might cut off coal supplies. Third, the general rise in prices of commodities has led coal users to believe that coal will follow along, and forward buying of bituminous is increasing.

* * *

Currently coal loadings are running 10,000,000 tons a week or at approximately the 1929 rate, and it is believed that this rate will be maintained through the first quarter, according to one leading coal dealer.

* * *

Favors Longer Coal Contract

Likelihood of higher prices in the future, for which the warning signals are already flying, is being considered an actuality by coal users. A leading dealer this week offered an industrial user one price under a one-year contract, and a higher price under a two-year contract. The industrial user signed the two-year contract at the higher price, and seemed very happy to do so.

Eastman Kodak $8.50 Net Seen

Eastman Kodak Co. is sharing in the general improvement in the economic picture. With more money in its pockets and stimulated interest in photography, the public has been spending more for cameras, films and prints. The movie industry, with the nationwide expansion of the "two-pictures-a-day" idea, has been using more celluloid, and producing more pictures. Even foreign demand for Eastman products has been rising. As a result, the company for the year 1936 is expected to show $8.50 a share on common stock, against $6.91 in 1935, according to one source.

* * *

Railroad freight loadings in the week ended last Saturday were up less than seasonally from the preceding Christmas week, and the gap of gain over a year ago narrowed, it is indicated. Official figures will be made public later this week by the Association of American Railroads. Loadings figures normally are issued on Fridays, and whether they are issued that day this week depends upon whether compilations are delayed by the New Year holiday last Friday.

Bankers Await Budget Message

Important bankers are refraining from making definite forecasts with respect to 1937 prospects until more tangible information is forthcoming as to the nature of the government's financial requirements the last half of the current fiscal year, which ends June 30. Nevertheless, the feeling exists that should the government's need for additional borrowing in the open market prove to be relatively small, the inference would be that the administration would have a free hand in proceeding with any credit control program which it should choose to adopt. The primary purpose of such control, it is argued, would be to prevent undue credit expansion through limitation of the credit base. The possibility is not being overlooked, at the same time, that should the current business improvement give any evidence of faltering in its upward stride, the government might choose to defer the imposition of any further credit control measures.

RISE In Commodity PRICES

HESITATION NOTED

The general commodity price level continued its rise in the latest week although signs of hesitation appear in such of the leading markets.

Sugar, lard, copper and wool remained strong, while rubber reacted sharply and cotton, silk and tin declined moderately.

The Dun & Bradstreet Daily Commodity Index finished the year 1936 at 142.65, the highest point of the recovery period. Following the extended holidays, the index eased slightly to 142.48 on January 4, 1937. This represented a gain of about 24 per cent above the 1936 low and almost 10 per cent since the end of last October, while the rise over last year's figure of 122.28 amounts to about 17 per cent.

Strength in corn featured the grain markets, which closed strong and higher after experiencing some hesitation early in the week. Corn ended an active year, with prices at the highest level since August, 1928. Coffee and sugar displayed considerable strength. Refined sugar was advanced from 4.80c. to 5.00c. per pound, with raws up 5 points to the basis of 3.95c. per pound. Lard continued active, with final quotations very firm.

A sharp break took place in rubber, amounting to 3 cents from the recent peak. This was caused by the unexpected action taken by the International Rubber Regulation Committee in an effort to relieve the tight spot situation. The committee decided to issue export licenses for crude for six months instead of for one to three months as heretofore. In a surprise move the price of copper was advanced ⅝ of a cent to 12 cents on the last day of the old year. This was the highest since 1930. Demand for lead and zinc was moderate, with prices firm at former levels.

SHOE OUTPUT

All-Time PEAK SET BY N. E. States

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

Even though the figures for December are not available the shoe producing states of New England are certain to set a new all time yearly production record.

This startling information is provided us by the New England Shoe and Leather Association which points out that for the eleven months through November this section produced more shoes than in any full year in the past.

Thus it stands to reason that regardless of the pairs of shoes turned out in the final month of 1936 a new peak is inevitable. At the same time the association informs us that New England led the country in production during November for the seventh consecutive month. The result is that New England's output reached 121,674,151 pairs for the first 11 months, a gain of 8 per cent over the corresponding 1935 period. This compares with a net gain for the industry as a whole of 5.8 per cent. New England has regained its leading position in the shoe industry! And 1937 prospects seem particularly bright with the New England Shoe & Leather Association expecting it should be even better than 1936, barring unforeseen circumstances.

* * *

While the shoe industry is the highlight of the New England business picture it is not the sole feature worthy of mention. From the weekly survey of Dun & Bradstreet we garner some surprising facts regarding manufacturing activity in general. Of first importance is the news that there has been less pre-inventory hesitation than usual and an early resumption of buying is expected as soon as stock taking is completed. The flow of money into commercial channels in this section shows no slackening. Indeed, if anything, a quickening is in evidence. Wholesale collections are reported improved by the agency and are now classed as fairly good. New England department stores have shown rather consistent gains and in November collected 49.5 per cent of regular charge account items outstanding at the first of the month. Boston stores bettered this with a showing of 51.2 per cent.

* * *

Notebook: Great Northern Railway preferred is a candidate for the honor of chartists favorite . . . At least for 1937 . . . Last year it is pointed out that the stock held in a very narrow range . . . And the sinking spell toward the close of 1936 uncovered some rather impressive support . . . Accordingly chartists believe it a purchase on dips with the idea that this year will see it breaking through the top of its trading range . . . The mail-order stocks have had a hard time of it since announcing increases in capitalizations . . . However, we can not help but feel recent low prices are attractive enough to be labelled bargain levels . . . With Sears, as usual, our favorite.

* * *

Despite the sporadic and selective rallies staged by the market of late it can not yet be said the downtrend has been broken. In fact, the best one can say is that some sort of an attempt has been made to regain the upward path. To our way of looking at recent action it appears rails again hold the key to future action. On the Associated Press average a distinct downward price channel has been quitted by the group. This is not true of several other averages. However, we feel it is of sufficient importance to warrant our taking the view that whatever strength the market displays over the balance of the month will be fostered by an extension of the current recovery by rails.

* * *

Ticker Ticks: Utilities have been of some aid to carriers in sustaining the list while industrials are obviously inclined to lag . . . All of which convinces us that the last named did a fairly good discounting job during 1936 and may not show anywhere near the same percentage gain of the other two this year . . . Tape readers tell us that National Acme shows up very well of late . . . Technically it's more than likely that the market will bounce back and forth in a constantly narrowing range for the rest of January . . . Which explains in brief the reason we have not expanded our hypothetical market position despite the fact we saw rally possibilities late last week.

I. C. C. Hits Surplus TAX LAW

CALLS STATUTE DESTRUCTIVE

By B. C. FORBES

Will Congress be convinced by the sound arguments presented by the Interstate Commerce Commission demonstrating that the hastily-enacted law penalizing corporations for building up reserves is destructive?

The powerful governmental body, which exercises complete domination over all our railroads and which has not always exhibited tender mercy toward its wards, urges our lawmakers to reconsider the measure, especially with a view to exempting railroads from its terms.

* * *

Our railroads have not fared well, all things considered, under regulation. Rates were whittled down and other things done to the railroads which resulted in preventing most of them from building up adequate financial reserves during good times.

Consequently, lean times inevitably plunged many railway systems into financial trouble. The commission aptly points out that the principle underlying the surtax on undistributed profits runs foul of another policy prescribed by the administration, namely, the creation of sinking funds and the refinancing of improvements and additions out of earnings.

It adds that weaker roads "should be encouraged to use their earnings, to the extent authorized or approved by us, to build up and improve their property, retire their funded debt and create corporate surpluses in amounts sufficient to meet their emergency needs, support their borrowing powers, and afford insurance against obsolescence."

Every person competent to judge has condemned the law as it stands. The testimony has been that its operation, if continued, would tend to discourage corporations anxious to strengthen their financial structures during periods of prosperity, thus rendering them impotent to wrestle with the next severe spell of depression.

* * *

Obviously, if the law imperils our transportation corporations it also imperils other corporations.

Will Washington heed the warning earnestly sounded by the body created by Congress to insure proper administration of the nation's vital transportation system?

Not to do so would be a tragedy, inviting infinite trouble by and by.

This "inside" expression comes in a statement to the writer from one of America's foremost automobile executives:

"I think there is quite a firm attitude on the part of those in charge of the larger automobile industries. Probably both sides will know they have been in a fight before this thing is adjusted."

This nation recently noted a strong tendency in Europe and this country to "pamper" creditors, help debtors, penalize those who have saved in order to favor those who didn't save.

Am I wrong in reasoning that here and throughout the world the tendency has been to favor debtors and to take the edge off the saving habit?

Boston Gas Head Names Executive Changes

Four major changes in executive personnel were announced today by E. M. Farnsworth, vice-president and general manager of the Boston Consolidated Gas Company.

Frank D. Cadwallader, for 15 years vice-president in charge of sales, has been advanced to a newly created vice-presidency in which he will have charge of public relations.

J. J. Quinn, who has been assistant to Mr. Cadwallader, becomes the company's sales manager in direct charge of all sales operations.

E. H. Kasker has been named assistant to Mr. Farnsworth.

R. W. Menard becomes superintendent of the investigation department in addition to his present duties as head of the appraisal department.

EXETER MFG. Profitable Year

For the first time figures are available showing the financial condition of Exeter Manufacturing Co. of Exeter, N. H., and the company proves to be a profitable small cotton goods producer. With a plant equipped with 850 looms and about 25,000 spindles the company makes sheetings, twills and drills, elastic cloths.

In the nine months ended Sept. 30, 1936, the company had a net profit of $72,442. This was equal, after dividends on the 307 shares of $7 preferred, to $8.94 per share on the 8173 shares of common. No comparison with any prior period is possible.

MOTOR SHARES SET PACE

New York, Jan. 7 (AP)—Hopes for an early settlement of the General Motors strike, together with an apparently favorable reception given the President's congressional message, today spurred the stock market on one of the speediest recovery jaunts in several weeks.

Led by automotive, steel, rail, utility and specialty issues, gains of fractions to around 5 points were distributed over a broad front. The pace was fast throughout, with the ticker tape frequently behind.

Bonds improved moderately and commodities exhibited renewed strength.

With federal conciliators pushing the issue, some observers thought negotiations between the leading motor manufacturers and the unions might get under way quickly and thus bring an end to shut-downs that have already thrown thousands out of work.

In the forefront of the forward push were Chrysler, General Motors, Nash, Yellow Truck, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, U. S. Pipe & Foundry, Vanadium, Youngstown Sheet & Tube, Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Southern Pacific, Delaware & Hudson, Great Northern, Standard Gas, Public Service of N. J., Consolidated Gas, American Power & Light, du Pont, Goodyear, U. S. Rubber, J. I. Case, Deere, Pure Oil, Armour & Co., Westinghouse, Loew's, Electric Power & Light, Kelvinator, Electric Auto-Lite, Newport Industries, American Chain, American Woolen preferred, Douglas Aircraft, Congoleum, Mohawk Carpet, Pullman, American Locomotive and American Car & Foundry.

UNEMPLOYMENT

Increase IN OUTPUT Will Aid

From 1929 to 1932, the output of all products in the United States showed a decrease of 33 per cent whereas total employment declined only 22.1 per cent, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute.

More people were thus on the payrolls in 1932 than were necessary to handle the volume of output. This resulted in unprofitable operations, a situation which could not be maintained indefinitely without leading to general bankruptcy.

Consequently, when the recovery movement began in 1933 it was not only possible but necessary to increase output at a faster rate than employment.

This is why production showed an increase of 31.3 per cent from 1932 to 1936 while employment rose only 14.1 per cent. Since 1932, it has not been a case of employment lagging behind production but a case of production catching up with employment. Even in 1936, employment still had a slight advantage over production in relation to conditions which prevailed in the pre-depression year 1929. Production was 12 per cent below the 1929 level while employment showed a decrease of 11.1 per cent.

Production and employment in 1936, however, reached a close enough balance to indicate that any further expansion of output in the future will be accompanied by a corresponding increase in employment. This means that the elimination of the unemployment still remaining is merely a matter of increasing production to a figure which should be attainable without excessive difficulty.

It is true that in order to absorb the present number of unemployed people, which averaged 11,284,000 during the first ten months of 1936, it would be necessary for production to rise above the pre-depression level in 1929.

This is because there was some unemployment in 1929 and because the supply of workers has increased since that time as a result of the gain in population. An increase in production, however, of only 14.2 per cent over the 1929 volume would end unemployment.

Although this would mean an increase of 29.8 per cent over the volume of production in 1936, the required expansion is by no means out of reach. In the past, an increase of 14.2 per cent over a previous peak has often been attained.

There are indications, however, that employment will show little if any increase in 1937 in view of the prospect of some curtailment of output. It is certain that the output of agricultural products will show a decline as the result of the 1936 drouth. Some recession in industrial output is also indicated by the excessive rate of the past two years and by signs of an interruption of the inflationary movement which has been the fundamental factor accounting for the current recovery movement.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S outline of the objectives of his second administration commendably and intelligently defines the benefits he aspires to confer upon his country.

His statement of the needs of the nation is accurate.

He interprets the national horror of war as a mandate to Congress for permanent assurance of peace.

His assurance that he will continue to pursue the ideals of security for industry and of security for labor and the aged, ALL WITHIN THE ESTABLISHED AMERICAN ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL STRUCTURE, inspires the people to confidence that these ends will be gained.

His petition for harmony between governing agencies, for economy and efficiency in management of public affairs, for adherence to constitutional concepts of government, accords with the unchangeable desires of the people he represents.

* * *

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE is a heartening avowal of THE BASIC AMERICAN PRINCIPLES upon which the nation has traditionally achieved progress and in which its people habitually find comfort.

Mr. Roosevelt reveals an earnest mind in which the tenets of democracy have become unassailable

His determination to accomplish the broad humanitarian objectives of his continuing administration WITHOUT DEPARTURE FROM FUNDAMENTAL DEMOCRACY is clearly asserted.

The key to his intentions is inscribed in a single sentence of his message to Congress:

"The United States of America, within itself, must continue the task of making democracy succeed."

That Mr. Roosevelt has seen the complete vindication of democracy as the only true governmental embodiment of the human ideals of liberty and opportunity is attested by his comment on the experience of less fortunate nations.

* * *

WITH PLAIN REFERENCE to nations which have submerged the natural rights of governed peoples in recourse to tyranny and oppression, the President said:

"Often with improvident assent of the masses of the people themselves, new forms of government were set up with oligarchy taking the place of democracy.

"In oligarchies, militarism has leapt forward, while in those nations which have retained democracy, militarism has waned."

The sincerity of the President's devotion to fundamental American principles of government reflects the broadening experience of his difficult years in office.

In the course of his first term, he has struggled with mounting problems of economics and of social distress. Many departures from established governmental practice have been urged upon him, and some pursued. He has not lacked the courage to deal with new problems in new ways.

His courage has led him into uncertain fields, often dangerous fields. It has caused him to make mistakes, which he freely acknowledges.

* * *

THIS FACT was brought out in his comment on the outlawing of the National Recovery Act, regarding which he said:

"Sober second thought confirms most of us in the belief that the broad objectives of the National Recovery Act were sound. We know now that its difficulties arose from the fact that it tried to do too much."

Agreement with this statement expands in the knowledge that the SOUND OBJECTIVES of the recovery act were NOT outlawed.

They have, in fact, achieved a remarkable measure of fulfillment. Industries of all classes have molded these sound objectives into their individual structures.

HIGHER WAGES, SHORTER HOURS AND IMPROVED WORKING CONDITIONS WERE THE SOUND OBJECTIVES OF THE RECOVERY ACT, AND THESE ARE BEING INCORPORATED INTO AMERICAN INDUSTRY FOR THE BENEFIT OF LABOR ON A CONTINUOUSLY ENLARGING AND PERMANENT SCALE.

Mr. Roosevelt comes to the threshold of his second administration thoroughly convinced of the infallible wisdom of the American form of government.

His study of other forms of government has confirmed his belief in the great fact, which he never could have doubted, that America has now and always has had the only GOOD government.

* * *

MR. ROOSEVELT knows democracy is the BEST form of government on earth.

He knows America has that form of government, and must KEEP IT.

With these principles indelibly impressed in his mind and heart, President Roosevelt can advance confidently to the unfinished business of national recovery the people of the United States have left in his hands.

Lights That Never Fail

THERE is always a light-bringer from Europe on his way to the benighted and heathenish American, or else one of these ten-thousand candle-power minds is leaving us with Polonius-like admonitions to watch our step.

Sir George Paish, British economist, stepped off the boat with this package for Boobus Americanus:

"I HAVE COME TO AMERICA TO PLACE MY KNOWLEDGE OF THE WORLD SITUATION AT THE SERVICE OF THE AMERICAN PEOPLE."

Is Sir George aware that there is no "WORLD SITUATION" in America? Or maybe it is the intention of the gentleman to create one?

SOMETHING "DOWN" BY HIS GOVERNMENT ON THE DEBT WOULD BE MORE ACCEPTABLE TO US THAN "KNOWLEDGE OF THE WORLD SITUATION."

Lord Marley, another light-bringer from England, is leaving us. He flings us this ray from his 60-watt mind:

"YOU ALWAYS KNOW EXACTLY WHAT HAPPENED, BUT VERY OFTEN YOU DON'T KNOW WHY."

In England a King-Emperor was preparing to quit his throne for two months and the English people didn't know ANYTHING of what was happening, and when it did happen they did not know WHY.

When the American people get thoroughly well fed-up on this interminable procession of soft-soapers and slammers from the other side, we might send a collection of our own spellbinders over there to entertain them on "THE INTRICACIES OF THE ART OF DEBT-WELCHING."

The People's Mandate

MASSACHUSETTS Senate President Wragg and House Speaker Cahill, in keynote speeches to the legislature, both pledged co-operation to the pay-as-you-go policies of the new Governor.

In such co-operation the people generally will find satisfaction. For throughout the state there is abundant sentiment for tax reduction by intelligent cutting of government costs and elimination of useless bureaus and services.

It is sentiment peculiar to no one party. Both the Democrat and the Republican pay taxes, and each knows how burdensome government can be.

Consequently policies that seek to maintain efficiency at the lowest possible cost to taxpayers cannot belong exclusively to a Governor, nor to any Senator or Representative.

Rather, such policies are the PEOPLE'S MANDATE.

And Representatives and Senators truly representative of the popular will should consider it their duty to abide by the mandate.

Business on the upgrade, wages increasing, jobs daily more numerous—legislators now have the power to speed recovery by removing or curtailing many of the drains on the public pocketbook made necessary by the depression.

They should not fail.

Brother Andre Is Dead

BROTHER ANDRE, "Miracle Man of Montreal," dead at 91, was often called a living saint.

Year after year thousands from Canada, the United States and even Europe visited him at Montreal's famous St. John's Oratory to obtain his blessing.

He was acclaimed by many as a superman, by others as holy, by all as great.

And yet, in spite of the homage of thousands, Brother Andre lived the humblest of lives, seeking neither material wealth nor physical comfort for himself.

Brother Andre is gone, his hand no more to be upraised in blessing to the multitude; but the memory of his humility and sanctity lives, as all that is good must live, even in this money-mad age.

Goodwin's Fine Record

MASSACHUSETTS automobile registrations are increasing—from 941,749 in 1934 to 1,028,673 in 1936, but traffic deaths show a decrease—953 in 1934 and 803 in 1936.

That, briefly, is Registrar Goodwin's report.

A decrease in deaths, especially at a time of more automobiles and higher speeds, is evidence of good work on the part of responsible officials. And Registrar Goodwin deserves praise.

That's That

By Bruce Gustin

The average taxpayer would think he was dreaming if he received from his tax spenders a notice that he will not be required to pay any property taxes this year because:

"We have more money in the treasury than last year. We don't owe a penny. Our streets and bridges are in better shape than on this same date last year. Our citizens haven't been on any relief projects and are just as well off as they are in any of the towns that did participate in such extravagant projects."

This "no property tax" notice is a reality in GAINESVILLE, ALA.

This is the ninth consecutive year property owners in Gainesville, Ala., have been notified they need not pay any general municipal tax. How is that possible? Mayor Norwood has a simple explanation. It is "DON'T SPEND ANY MONEY UNLESS NECESSARY." He explains that "politics are not tolerated in the management of our town." Revenues obtained mainly from automobile and privilege licenses are more than sufficient to finance all necessary municipal activities.

Senator Carter Glass of Virginia, celebrating his 79th birthday, hopes he will live another year so he "may become the oldest of the Glass tribe." Except for that, he says, he is "ready to die." Good citizens all over the nation who admire Senator Glass for his statesmanship, level-headed thinking, and his unwavering championship of American principles, hope he will enjoy many more birthdays and that this nation will have his services for many more years. Men of his caliber are all too rare in the councils of the United States.

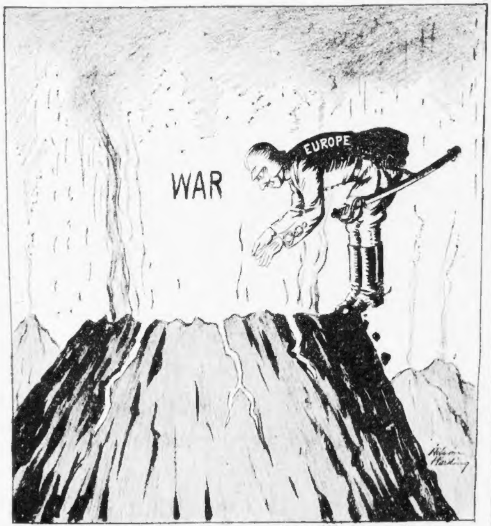
Many arguments are advanced in support of legislation to have government take the profits out of war by operating all industries in war time. In this connection it is urged that "if industry knew its plants would be taken over upon the outbreak of war, the heat would be turned on Congress to prevent war being declared. Too many people stand to profit from war the way things are now." Undoubtedly, there is a lot of truth in that argument.

There are dangers, however, connected with any plan for government operation of all business in the event of war. It is conceivable there might be an administration which would involve the country in war to gain control over all industry. Once government assumes control over anything, there is no certainty it ever would relinquish that control. It wouldn't take many years of government management to ruin American industry.

You may have noticed that most estimates of world wheat production exclude Russian production, which used to be an important factor. Right now Russia is more interested in storing up huge reserves of food and other supplies in preparation for the next war than in exports. So far as the Russian people are concerned, there is an actual shortage of some foods, large quantities of which are being stored as a war reserve. Providing supplies adequate to maintain an army of 10 million men for an indefinite period is considered more important than keeping Russians' stomachs full now.

"Idiot's Delight"

By Nelson Harding



How that volcano fascinates
The warlike European states!
Upon that yawning mouth of hell
The Old World once more hesitates.

And mothlike, hovers on the rim
Around that ancient crater grim
Where loss of balance now may mean
A final, fatal plunge for him!

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

O. O. McIntyre

New York, Jan. 7.—I often wonder why people, especially those rooted to America, do not read more of Ed Howe. In particular his "The Story of a Country Town." I notice it has been republished in London elegantly by some old established firm and the British are making it a best seller.

Howe could not at first get anyone interested in the book and at last set it up in his own print shop. In time, however, Howells and Twain read and praised it. The author is an octogenarian now, almost blind and one of the writers to amass a snug fortune in a small town newspaper.

His "Globe Sights" column in his Atchison paper was one of the most widely quoted in America. A column of homely philosophy that earned him the sobriquet of Sage of Potato Hill. That was his residence when he broke from his wife and took to living in a separate house on the same estate.

He told me a story in Miami one year somewhat typical of his plight. A farmer quarreled with his wife and one black winter night was sent for kindling. He did not come back for years and she lived on there. On another stormy night years later he tumbled an armload of wood in the box with: "Here's your kindling."

I talked to a despairing fellow today whose soul seems to have died within him. He has lived to experience the futility of his most cherished ambitions. I frequently in such exigencies think of my home town and how many worthy, talented people, tied by circumstance, who have never been able to do the things of which they were capable and longed to do. Many a fine actor, musician, dancer and author is literally buried alive in your town and mine.

Every one now and then has a quick flash of foreboding. I recall my wife having a sudden, eldritch stab of pity while wrapping a doll one Christmas for a neighbor child. The child died in a horrible catastrophe before the doll was received.

Not long ago I watched workers dropping those long scaffold ropes over the edge of a building near Times Square with an unusual shudder. I idled many moments contemplating the hazards. And in the evening editions I read that one toppled to death.

Kipling, walking a country road, felt an urge to cut across a field—a path never taken before. Directly he came upon a relative who had been hunting and had been desperately wounded by accidental discharge of a gun. Kipling's short cut saved a life.

Such happenings are flicked with what we think is the supernatural, but realists call coincidence.

My dentist, Guy Campbell, was telling that among his patients was a wealthy man, who came for a set of teeth. He had had many from here and there, but none had proved satisfactory.

After pouring out his complaints, the dentist set about to test his skill. He did the job, weighted with much gold, and sent a bill which was naturally a bit high.

The patient came in later, all smiles, tore up his bill and made out a check for an amount in amazing excess of the charge. Then he took out a fat cigar and with his teeth snapped off the end. "That," he said, "is what I have been waiting to do for 10 years."

Then—what a rambling column this is turning out to be—there is a mistaken idea business men have no talents. Such as actors and often necktie salesmen. Not long ago I was in the office of a hard-fisted executive. A hell-for-leather sort like Herb Swope. The day's worries were over and for no reason he began some impersonations. One of a floor walker and then of himself as a child singing about Jack Frost. Something about "Who is it that paints the leaves all red? Jack Frost, Jack Frost, etc." It was a howl.

Out of these musings come, too, this fait accompli: No Carnegie Hall Symphony can take the place of Grandma's tea kettle, a-singing merrily away back there in the old walnut-gathering days of a prairie autumn.

Thingumabob: Damon Runyon finds that Jack Kiernan and Sid Mercer are the only two pipe-smoking sport writers on the big circuit. ... Among the last of the metropolitan chewers of the weed are Jack Norworth and Fred Allen. ... Messmore Kendall has one of the most valuable collections of Washingtoniana in America.

Most columnists, I suppose, feel much like Ding, the cartoonist, when the wife of a friend came into his office to observe: "You must get a great deal of praise from all sides." "Not a whit more," he answered, "than I need."

Old Telephone Legends

The Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

Edwin C. Hill

Broadcasting on Christmas Eve, this speaker, by mingled use of air waves and telephone wires, relayed a Christmas greeting from the telephone company to millions of telephone users in the United States and Canada. The broadcast was delivered in the telephone nerve center of America, the long distance switchboard room in the city of New York.

As the talk went out on wire and air, 400 young women operators, side by side at the block-long boards, were calling Chicago, Los Angeles, Seattle, London, Paris, Cape Town, Sydney, Australia, and a hundred other far-flung communities around the curve of the earth. Men and women all over America were projecting their Christmas greetings for thousands of miles in the space of seconds of time. A thrilling experience in workaday life.

THE BEGINNING?

And that experience moved me to search back through fact and legend for the inspiration of the telephone—so indispensable to our modern life. And here is the first bit of curious legend I excavated from the old books:

"About the yeare of our Lord 1554, a wenche who came from Gloucester, named Elizabeth Croft, about the age of 18 yeares, stoode upon a Scaffolde, at Poule's Crosse, all the Sermon tyme, where she confessed, that she, being moved by dyvers lewde persons thereunto, had upon the fourteenth of March last, before passed, counterfaited certain speaches in a house without Aldersgate of London, through which the people of the whole city were wonderfully molested, for that all men might hear the voice but not see her person.

"The penance being ended and the people satisfied, the officers of the court took the woman and shut her for a time in the prison, but after did she return to her own country and was no more heard of."

Does our first hint of the telephone lie in that ancient legend? Of course, the principle of the telephone has been known for centuries and was first set forth in a book published in 1609. It may surprise the reader, but an experimenter named Hook began to study the subject in 1661, and six years later succeeded in transmitting sound over a wire. In 1821 Sir Charles Wheatstone, an Englishman, conveyed the sounds of a musical box from the cellar to the attic of his house.

BELL THE PIONEER

But these early dreams, fascinating as they were, came to nothing, and it remained for the father of the telephone, Alexander Graham Bell, to give us the world-wide network of communication upon which civilization leans so heavily.

Here are some odd facts about the early telephone. Mr. Raikes, when postmaster general of Great Britain, sent the first public message ever transmitted through the telephone between London and Paris. The message was spoken on March 18, 1891. The first words from the English side were the following:

"And the Lord said, My voice shall traverse continents, islands and seas. Thus have I promised it to My people forever." A brief conversation then took place between Mr. Raikes and M. Jules Roche, French Minister of Posts and Telegraphs, after which Mr. Raikes communicated a message from the then Prince of Wales to M. Carnot, the French President, and made a speech of congratulation and greeting into the ear of M. Roche, who replied in similar terms, both speeches being in French.

It was also Professor Bell who first showed the telephone to Queen Victoria at Osborne. The inventor subsequently told the story of his visit:

"We all stood about a little table upon which was the machine, the queen opposite, Princess Beatrice on one side and her majesty's secretary on the other. The queen then told her secretary to ask me to explain the telephone. After doing so, Queen Victoria turned to speak to some one and as the connection came, I turned suddenly, and what do you suppose I did?

"You see, my wife is deaf, and I am among deaf people so much that I forgot and patted her hand to attract her attention. I did—I really did—the Queen of England and Empress of India! Was she indignant? Oh no! As she put her ear to the telephone, she laughed. Whether it was the music over the wires or my little action, I never knew . . ."

In diplomacy, the telephone has more than once played a prominent part. In 1906 it was the means of bringing about a change in the presidency of Salvador. President Gutierrez had a powerful rival in General Regalado, the head of the army, and when the revolution broke out, the latter telephoned to the palace demanding the president's abdication, as the army had already turned against him.

What reply Gutierrez gave to this strange message is not on record, but he left the capital within an hour, never to return.
